"I won't be able to come up after you," said Warren from the door as he was leaving that morning. "Do you think you can manage to get over there alone?"

"Why, of course,' said Helen reassuringly, "why not?"

Helen followed directions implicitly. It seemed that she would never get off, there were so many things to think of at the last minute. She was sure she hadn't packed fresh lineneoush for Waren, and at the last minute couldn't remember whether she had put in her black and white dress.

It was more trouble than her Panama trip she reflected, and then smiled at the absurdity of the thought. Just as she was about to go and Nora had carried her bag out to the elevator, she decided to call up Louise to see if everything was all right with Winifred. Louise was amused. "Better hurry," she admonished, "you don't want to miss you tain." In the little waiting room at the ferry the air was close. Warren had not arrived and they had not a great doal of time. Helen wondered after she had waited a minute whether she ought to cross over. She hardly remembered now whether Warren had told her to or not.

If the had she did not remember the fact at all, but then she had been thinking of other things the whole time he had been talking. The hand told her to or not.

KAUFMAN'S Final Wind-Up Sale Only a Few More Sale Days and the Sale Ends

Special Notice!

Our Temporary Store will positively be closed this week, and we want to again tell you that we are only closing this store in order that we can devote our entire time to the arranging for the opening of the New KAUFMAN'S UNDERSELLING STORE. Our Sales Force will be given their summer vacation; our Buyers and Department Heads will leave at the end of this week for the New York Markets to secure the proper merchandise for the new store. As stated before, all of this entails a vast amount of work.

It is our sole aim and intention—when we open the doors of the new Kaufman's Underselling Storeto give all Harrisburg and vicinity a shopping place that they will be proud of. Each department in the new store will be stocked with entirely new merchandise and, in fact, will be a store in itself.

A NEW ADDITION WILL BE THE BARGAIN BASEMENT

It will be the first one of its kind in this city and a little later on we are going to tell you more about it. Watch the daily papers closely for our special messages to you from time to time about the new store. *************

That the parade is a strong factor with such an enterprise is demonstrated by the remarkable showing of caprisoned chorses, vans of open cages containing fierce looking wild beasts, herds of elephants and camels that follow the cages, handsome girls atop of glittering wagons, brass bands, charlots drawn by Arabian steeds and happy laughing clowns. This is the show that gives so much for so little. Doot much the big free street parade that teaves the show grounds promptly at ten o'clock every morning.—Adv.

Former State Printer's Automobile in Accident

Atlantic City, N. J., July 26.—Running away in Chelsea yesterday, a high-powered automobile owned by Clarence M. Busch, one-time public printer of Pennsylvania and now a resident of New York and owner of the Hotel Ostend here, crushed two women and demolished a fireplug.

The injured women are Mrs. Laura. Lasby, of Pennsgrove, who is suffering from a sprained ankle and shock, and Miss Irvana Anderson, of Pennsgrove, who also is suffering from shock.

An attendant on foot had started the machinery of the big car to move it out of the way of another vehicle when the machine suddenly sprang forward. The chauffeur leaped for the flying car, but missed his grip and fell crashed into a fire hydrant.
