eral years, in the pendency of the suit to dissolve the Steel Corporation, the story of a second consolidation to include the leading independent steel companies was given wings once more in the past week. Telegraphed from Cleveland, the center of the iron ore trade, and touched with verisimilitude by the use of names of well-known steel manufacturers in proper connection with their respective companies, the report went to every quarter of the country. The juxtaposition of the Bethlehem and Crucible Steel companies in a single article would have been enough of itself, with the speculative fever at its height, to make a new appeal to imaginations already under the spell of war millions. But to these two, which Wall Street lately has been making newly famous, were added the names of seven independent steel companies with no particular war records, the whole representing a total, as the article has it, of $540,500,000 (par value) of bonds and stocks in existing security issues.

as the acceptance of bonds and several property issues.

"As long as the legality of the Steel Corporation is in question in the country's highest court, no such consolidation will be seriously thought of by steel manufacturers. It is highly improbable that the nine companies probable that the nine companies commend—the Bethlehem, Colorado, Lones & probable that the nine companie named—the Bethlehem, Colorado, Lackawanna, Republic, Jones de Laughlin, Crucible, Pennsylvania Cambria and Youngstown Sheet am Tube—could ever be gathered into one "Without dissent heads of these companies, as fast as they have beer reached by newspaper inquiry, have said that the Cleveland report had no foundation. The fact that the Steen Corporation and these nine companies represent together 90 to 95 per cent, of the country's output of steel ingots is sufficient reason for saying that apart from all court decisions, public sentinent would not tolerate a second Companier would not tolerate a second Companier would not tolerate a second Companier.
