MUNICIPAL STATISTICS OF AMSTERDAM

The annual booklet issued by the city of Amsterdam, giving statistical details of local affairs, which has just been published, contains numerous facts relating to 1914.

The population increase during the year of nearly 14,000 to a point beyond the 600,000 mark was almost double the gain during each of several years just preceding and more than double the annual gain a decade ago. (Netherlands population figures were given in Commerce Reports for June 28, 1915.)

Total municipal receipts and expenditures were each approximately $18,000,000. About a quarter of the receipts and a sixth of the expenditures related to city undertakings—gas, electricity, waterworks, street railways, etc.

Permits were granted to erect 2,687 houses. The number of public schools, from primary to high, was 256; of pupils, 76,905. Their total cost was $2,800,000. Besides these there were 156 private, charity and denominational schools, with 42,971 pupils.

Of the periodicals issued in Amsterdam 18 were dailies, 5 semi-weeklies, 14 bi-weeklies, 1 every three weeks, 10 semi-monthlies, 94 monthlies, 1 ten times a year, 6 bimonthlies, 4 quarterly, 1 semi-annual, 1 four times every two years, 1 six times every two or three years, and 31 irregulars; total, 318 publications.

The 24 leading hotels had during the year 109,224 guests, of whom 12,824 were Americans. The number of people carried on the street cars was 100,951,476; fares received, $1,738,000.

being less than 2 cents a fare. The general fare is 2 cents, but on certain short stretches it is still less. Other sources of revenue brought the total receipts to $2,093,000, from which the paying operating and maintenance expenses, $40,000 was turned into the city treasury and $2,000 into the reserve fund.—Consul Frank W. Mahin, at Amsterdam, Netherlands, June 21.

SUNDAY OBSERVANCE IN CANADA

Because of the insistence of the attorney general of the province of Ontario that the Lord's Day act of Canada be enforced to the letter, the Sunday Detroit newspapers were not distributed in Windsor and surrounding territory on Sunday, July 17, 1915. The action of the government follows a complaint by the Toronto branch of the Lord's Day Alliance.

QUEEN OF SHEBA SEARCH OF THE BEST

Showered Quantities of Rich Presents on King Solomon and Received Many in Return

WAS FORCEFUL MEINIST

The International Sunday School Lesson for August 4, "Queen of Sheba Visits Solomon"

(By William T. Ellis)

One of the stimulating Kipling poems is called "The Queen of Sheba" and it narrates how you may find all the new things of to-day in the newspaper files of long ago. Just now the world is abuzz over the "new woman," and, opportunely the Sunday School Lesson introduces that forceful feminist, the Queen of Sheba, in quest of the best.

Nearly three thousand years have passed since this remarkable woman traveled fifteen hundred miles from her home in Arabia, by slow camel pace, across the desert sands, to take counsel with wise King Solomon. Throughout all these ages she has been a pictorial figure in proverb and story, and her single phrase, "The hair has never been so good," is one of the commonest coins current in universal speech. Legend, among Moslems and Christians alike, has been busy with the wonderful woman's name; but these fanciful stories interest us less than her message to our own times upon the woman question, which is this:

Problems are not primarily problems of sex, but of personality. The strong character makes its way, regardless of limitations of sex or conditions. The Queen of Sheba is second only to Solomon in the annals of their time. Even back in the dark days of woman's subjection, there shine brilliant names, Deborah and Abigail and Jezebel and Zenobia and Cleopatra. These women were personalities, although not all were good women.

It would be a mistake to let the girls of to-day gain the impression that any material change is to be effected in woman's sphere or fortune apart from the development of individual character. There is now, and there will continue to be, as the greatest desideratum in the so-called "woman movement" the need for pre-eminent personalities, women who can be leaders in the world.

Some American Queens
It is pertinent to recall that North America has been singularly productive of women of force and enterprise, who not held steadily out the torch of idealism. These heroines of faith have some qualities greater than their long-ago sister of Sheba. One of them, Victoria Murdock, of Wichita, was pictured shortly after her death, by her son, ex-Congressman Victory Murdock, in a tribute of singular appeal. I quote from "The Literary Digest" these passages which deal particularly with the spiritual qualities of this woman of affairs:

"Beautiful as her whole life was, beautiful as she was, she was most beautiful in her faith. It needed no sustaining argument. It offered nothing in rebuttal. It never weakened nor grew suddenly. It simply was as strong, as enduring, as unanswerable, and immovable as a granite mountain. She made a courteous show of gentle patience with the occasional or habitual doubters, but inwardly I imagine that she held the doubting intellect to be meager or sapsilly immature.

"Her life was full of change and incident of activity always. She knew joy in its full measure—and sorrow: she had lost five children; she had known hardship and ease, ambition, realization, disappointment, but her faith remained a single, stable, fixed point. Nor was it a silent faith to be cuddled out of harm's way. It was a faith that said, 'I will do it.' It put the Keystone of the Resurrection in the arch, because it knew the arch would fall without it. This is the faith not only of the gentle soul who does not know what it should be so, but it is the work of the strong soul who knows."

A Queen's Woman-way
In some degree, there exists every woman's breath that quality which led the Queen of Sheba to Jerusalem—the insatiable longing for the best. Sometimes with lesser women, this noble yearning for highest good, in the form of mere social emulation. Commonly, it incites mothers to send forth their sons to dare and do greatly. It is also revealed in the religious instinct, which makes woman the chief supporter of the church and temple and shrine in all lands. Every woman is naturally a priestess at the altar of idealism. God pity the race, if womanhood ever loses this impulse.

This dominant motive expressed itself in several ways in the case of the Queen of Sheba. She had curiosity, the desire to know. Also she had a sense of responsibility for her office; she wanted to learn the best ways of ruling her people. Ambitious for a great court and a great reign, she sought to examine into Solomon's administration. Also, feminine fashion, she desired to talk over her problems with a wise counselor; the normal woman wants to discuss her problems, small or great, with some other person, and, preferably, with a man.

The Cablegrams From Sheba
Within a week of the writing of these lines, meager cablegrams have come from the East, reporting the landward attack upon Aden by the Arabs of the Yemen. I wonder how many persons could read the news with the Queen of Sheba? Yet the Yemen, that most turbulent and fanatical section of Arabia, is the ancient Sheba; and Aden, the British stronghold at the entrance to the Red Sea, was once her seaport. This latest news told of the discomfiture of the camel corps; for still, as in the queen's day, the camel is the express train of Arabia—and his average speed is three miles an hour. To this day the spices leave Yemen as the queen traveled to Jerusalem, by the camel caravan, the water for passengers being slung over the animals' backs in gurgling goatskins.

MARDI GRAS AT PAXTANG
When you attend the Mardi Gras at Paxtang Park to-morrow do not fail to make your day's pleasure complete by attending the vaudeville performance at the park theater. The bill is an exceptionally good one. Olympia Desval is the feature attraction and presents what is probably the most remarkable dog and horse act the town has ever seen. One may have seen trained animals on a stage, but until you have seen the Desval act you have missed the biggest and best of them all. The balance of the show is made up of acts that are replete with comedy, originality and novelty.—Adv.
