

ARGUE QUESTION OF DOGS FOR ARGUMENT Before County and Mr. Detweiler Discuss Madness of Dogs They'll Go Into Reasons For Discussion

Before counsel for Dauphin county... Mr. Detweiler, an Oberlin farmer, respectively, even argue on the question of whether or not mad dogs should be kept singly or in a crowd of five when they want to bite calves, they'll have to argue before the Dauphin county court as to whether or not there is even room for argument.

That new phase of the story of the calf biting expedition of a quinet of alleged mad dogs developed yesterday when Victor Braddock, counsel for Mr. Detweiler filed a demurrer to the commissioners' answer to his suit for a claim of $160 a few weeks ago. The $160 represents what Detweiler says his slain calves are worth. The commissioners denied their responsibility on the ground that mad dogs do not chase around in a crowd when they go in for calf-chewing—that they always act singly. Ordinarily this grave problem would have been threshed out in argument when the question of the permanency of a preliminary mandamus obtained by Detweiler against the commissioners to pay the $160 was before the court. Detweiler's latest move, however, continues the case until the regular argument court, October 12. In demurring, he says the question of how many dogs isn't before the commissioners, that question has been settled by the preliminary mandamus to make his return. The auditor says five mad dogs killed the calves. Attorney Braddock contends, and all that remains is for the commissioners to do is to pay the money and not argue as to whether mad dogs operate alone or in bunches of five.

A RUBBER SATIN HAT AND A DOG FOR BATHING

This is the latest thing in conservative bathing costumes, and it is something like it is being worn at the beaches where society congregates this summer. Both a rubber hat and a dog must go with it to make it complete. The dog, a Boston bull, is not the kind of a dog that likes the water. But there isn't much chance of his being compelled to go into it. The lady who wears this kind of a costume on the beach does not expect to go in the water.

OF READING AND OWNING BOOKS. [New York World.] Hamlin Garland, a writer of books, is growing discouraged over the failure of the American people to buy and read new books. The current, he thinks, is against the reading of books, and he assigns as a reason for this decline in the reading habit that "one cannot get a collection of books together with a singing machine and an automobile. Among other things that are driving books out of the household and breaking up the reading habit where such a habit was formerly, have flourished Hamlin Garland mentions the "10-cent broad-sheet magazine," the daily newspaper, which we always have with us, and which is a necessity of city life, and chiefly, perhaps, the voluminous Sunday newspaper, with enough reading matter to last the ordinary reader who attempts to read it all until the next issue arrives."

WARSAW FALLS SAYS OFFICIAL STATEMENT

[Continued from First Page.] here would mean the early loss of Dvinsk, a most important junction of the Petrograd-Warsaw railroad. Desperate battles still are prevailing along the Narva river with the Germans meeting the Russians in the Russian defense, except at a point near Ostrolenska, where they forded the river, captured several thousand prisoners and forced the Russians back to the outer defenses of the northern front of the fortress of Lonna.
