timber production are absolutely es-sential to the continuance of agri-culture, according to an article in the year book of the Department of Agri-culture, just published. The result of exploiting the timber without thought of the future is the final disappearance of lumbering operations and therefore the withdrawal of an important local market for farm products. In addition forest fires often ravage the cut-over lands and thus preclude the develop-ment of a new local market by the resumption of lumbering, for after fire there is no chance for a new crop of trees.

> farmers, who irrigated their farms with water from the North Platte river, sent an urgent request to the government to restrict timber cutting on the North Platte watershed so that, as far as possible, high spring freshets could be prevented and more water made available for irrigation during the summer months, when the crops were most in need. They said that they relied upon the national forest, within which the updownded law to be within which the watershed lay, to in-sure a steady flow of water for their crops.

within which the watershed lay, to in-sure a steady flow of water for their crops. Source of Water The national forests, says the ar-ticle, besides being the American farm-er's most valuable source of wood, which is the chief building material for rural purposes, are also his most valuable source of water, both for irri-gation and domestic use. In the West they afford him a protected grazing fields, his buildings, his bridges, his roads, and the fertility of his soil. The national forests cover the higher portions of the Rocky Mountain ranges and a large part of the forested coast and islands of Alaska; some of the hilly regions in Montana and in the Dakotas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, and limited areas in Minnesota, Michi-gan, Florida and Porto Rico. In ad-dition land is now being purchased for national forests in the White Moun-tains of New England and in the southern Appalachians. In regions so widely scattered agricultural and forest conditions necessarily differ to a great degree, bringing about corresponding differences in the effect of the national forests on the agricultural interests of the value can be practiced, however, the farmer is directly benefited by the existence of national forests and by their proper management.

affairs. The development is a very disturb-ing one for the success of the Pan-American conference. Officials who were hoping Carranza would join a peace conference with his adversaries and meet the efforts of the Pan-Am-erican nations to settle the factional strife were much disappointed. Not On Good Terms It was said by Carranza agents that neither the Guatemalan nor the Brazilian ministers had been on good terms with Carranza and that it had been Carranza's intention to hand the Brazilian his passports as soon as he again reoccupied Mexico City. Brazilian ministers had been on good terms with Carranza and that it had been Carranza's intention to hand the Brazilian his passports as soon as he again reoccupied Mexico City. The participation of Brazil and Guatemala in the Pan-American conference, they said, brought Carranza's resentment to a climax. It was recalled that Castro, the dictator of Venezuela took much the same action when offended by foreign nations pressing for a settle-ment of affairs in his country. State Department advices to-day said General Carranza was making hurried preparations to move his capital from Vera Cruz to Mexico City. Archives and clerks had been moving to the capital since Friday. The im-pression in Mexican circles here is that Carranza proposes to 'establish imself in Mexico City and probably proclaim himself provisional president in the face of the Pan-American ef-fort to bring the factions together. American naval commanders at Vera Cruz have been ordered to place a warship at the disposal of the two diplomats, if they wish it. There are three gunboats in that vicinity, tho Wheeling and Machias at Tampico, the Marietta at Progreso and the Sacratento, on which the senior offi-cer, Commander McNamee, has his fag, is at Vera Cruz. Secretary Lansing said he was con-sidering American representation in Mexico City in view of the departure of the Brazilian minister, but he did not know what would be done. He assumed, however, that American diplomatic affairs would be in a "sort of a state of quiescence" in Mexico City. The reasons for the Brazilian Minister's visit to the United States at this time, the secretary says, were un-known to him.

there is no chance for a new crop of trees. From a region where productive imberland has been converted into a barren waste the farmers usually have to move out. There are parts of the United States in which cultivation of the soil has ended with the cessa-tion of local lumbering, or at least shortly afterward, because with the withdrawal of the woods workers went the farmers' market for meats, vege-tables, hay and grain. There are other regions where the stability of local agriculture is absolutely bound up with forest protection. This is strikingly true in parts of the Appalachian moun-tains of the East; it is no less true in many of the national forest regions of the West.
