NUMBER KILLED BY PENNSY FLYER

old, American. Henry B. Honstine, 21 American.

Harmon R. Bookwalter, 22, married, American. Filippo Del Roccoli, 24 Italian.

Frank E. McCool, 21, American, sent to the Houtingdon Hospital, was fatally injured. No hopes are entertained for his recovery.

Train Going 50 Miles an Hour The train was running about fifty miles an hour when it ploughed into the workmen.

The men were unable to escape the oncoming flyer because of their being blocked between the trains on the tracks to the right and left.

Trainmen and passengers went to the scene of the accident promptly. The only man showing any life was Frank E. McCool.

The accident was reported to Middle division headquarters and orders were received to send the express east and have the members of the crew make a statement regarding the accident on their arrival at Harrisburg.

Engine Covered With Blood The train reached the Pennsylvania Railroad station at 9:15 a. m. The front of the big passenger engine, No. 153, was covered with blood.

Portions of clothing, including one shoe, were taken from the engine when it arrived on the pit at No. 1 roundhouse.

The members of the crew were all from Harrisburg. As soon as they made their usual reports at the station they went to the office of Assistant Freight Trainmaster Jacob E. Whitman.

Engineer Trout said the fog was heavy this morning. He did not see any trackmen at work until he was too near to stop his train.

Other trainmen were passing and he is of the opinion the men not only failed to hear the warning from their fireman, but were caught in a trap between his train and another train going west.

DEALER FINED $100 FOR SELLING BAD MILK

Included five charges of selling milk and cream below the standard. He was fined twenty dollars on each charge.

The City Health Department only a short time ago brought the same charges against Hoak who was prosecuted at that time and fined.

Tests were taken recently of milk and cream that Hoak had been selling to Harrisburg consumers, the samples showing that the product did not come up to the requirements of the health rules.

Several other dealers were brought before Alderman Hovetter this morning for a hearing. They were allowed to go after being warned and paying the costs as it was the first time that they had sold milk below standard.

Other hearings were held late this afternoon and a number of dealers will be prosecuted next week.

Kinter, Republican, Dauphin, constable; William J. Esheman, Republican, Swatara township, school director; C. H. Miller, republican, second precinct, Hummelstown, assessor.

HARD COAL PRICES MAY BE REDUCED

The commission charges the roads with having granted concessions and offsets to their allied coal companies which have in effect been rebates in violation of law.

Commissioner Harlan, who dissented, contended that while modification of many coal rates was justified, the action was inconsistent in view of the recent rate increase for practically all other traffic.

The decision is the result of an inquiry instituted by the commission three years ago.

Local Coal Dealers Not Sure About Reductions

Local coal dealers are not positive that the reductions ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission on freight shipments of coal will affect the prices of hard coal sold here.

The coal dealers are not sure about the rulings of the commission in regard to shipments to interior points. If they apply to coal sent to points within the state and a cut in freight prices for these shipments, it is expected that the price of coal will be reduced eventually.

As no official orders have been received, according to the retailers, they are not well enough informed, they said, to make any forecast of hard coal prices in the future.

The condition arising before the coal operators for next April is causing much comment throughout the city. Both the bituminous and anthracite agreements with the United Mine Workers expire at that time, the first time such a state of affairs ever loomed up for the dealers.

Just what will happen at the expiration of the agreement is the cause of the apprehension. The local dealers believe that one thing the mine workers will ask for will be the recognition of the union, and this, they believe, will not be done by the operators.
