DEPRESSION

to American Industries and Business

In an address to-day before the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce Charles A. Sibely, expert from the Babson Statistical Organization, Welleslev Hills, a suburb of Boston, made a plea that businessmen start now insure permanent world peace after insure permanent world peace after the close of the great European war.

Mr. Sibely declared that world peace can only be established by the co-operation of every nation of the world in the organization of an international government, with legislative, judicial and police powers. He declared that the three things most needed to insure permanent peace are:

2. International tariffschedules.
3. International lines of communication, such as wireless, cable, mails, etc.

Business On Up Grade

Mr. Sibely took the place of L. D. Peavy, who was prevented from attending the noonday luncheon of the Chamber by falling victim to appendicitis. He was introduced by Spencer C. Gilbert, president. He said that the country will soon pass through a period of business expansion which, however, will be short lived. This period will be followed, the speaker said, "by the Lord knows what." He intimated that the nations of Europe, with the frapital exhausted and unobusiness that the proposition of the proposition

Prepare for Trouble

"We are not optimists," he said, "neither are we pessimists. We merely predict the future from the facts and figures at hand, and we know that following the close of the war in Europe there will be a long period of business depression, which will be one of the worst the modern world has ever known." He admonished the businessmen to lay by the profits of the present good times against the day of trouble close at hand.

He stated that Europe, now letting its capital and labor "go to the dogs," will owe the businessmen of this country millions which they will be unable to pay at the end of this conflict and
