ANTI-VIVISECTION SOCIETY IS ACTIVE

Members Begin Active Campaign at Williams Grove to Abolish Practice

Special to The Telegraph
Mechanicsburg, Pa., Sept. 1.—The center of attraction at the Grangers' Picnic at Williams Grove yesterday was the Antivivisection Society exhibit and the interesting booth in charge of Mrs. Margaret M. Halvey, recording secretary of the society, and Miss Henrietta Ford Ogden drew crowds of enthusiastic visitors. This marks the inauguration of a state-wide campaign both by speakers and mail, the society believing if voters understood what vivisection really is it would be abolished. A book for the registration of voters is the natural outcome of their experience in Harrisburg at the two last sessions of the Legislature, when the representatives, waylaid by wishes of the voters, refused the demand of the medical profession in Pennsylvania for enlarged facilities for vivisection. A cordial reception was given Frank Stephens, a well-known chautauque speaker, the lecturer of the afternoon, who brought new thoughts and facts for the lovers of animals. He said: "Vivisection destroys moral sense. What we urge against vivisection is that it brutalizes the doctor who practices it. The practice has grown to the enormous extent of 20,000 animals a year for one disease. The suffering involved is not merely of short duration, but long drawn out torture, keeping the animal alive to investigate." Mr. Stephens claimed that 177 children of the poor were inoculated to determine the difference between bovine tubercular germs and human germs; that experiments on animals leads to experiments on human beings. "The interests which are opposed are those of the medical profession, backed with the unlimited means of Rockefeller Institute in the research work, yet the latter employs a physician who is an antivivisectionist." In the interest of the American Antivivisection Society, of which he is president, Robert H. Logan, of Philadelphia, was present yesterday. The machinery exhibit is said to be larger than ever before at the grove and everything is in full swing. Demonstrators are busy and activity among all exhibitors is everywhere evident.

105 YEARS OLD—AND STILL PREACHING

In the "Interesting People" department of the September American Magazine appears an article about "Aunt Mary" Goddard who is 105 years old and still a "preaching elder" in the Quaker church. She lives in Brunswick, Me., and for more than seventy years has sat on the "facing seat" in Quaker meeting-houses, exercising a quiet influence for peace and good will. Following is an extract from the article about her: "As a 'preaching elder' she has labored among three generations. From the families to which she has been a minister of the Spirit have come men who have done things; yet it is doubtful if any one of them has really done as much as she has. "The could hardly be a greater contrast than that between Aunt Mary's peaceful sunset and the present European cataclysm. It is perfectly conceivable that this war with all its appalling destruction of human life may leave the nations deadlocked, ready to fight again, when their strength is renewed, and that it may not really count for so much in the progress of the world as the lives of those who hold to the doctrines of the Society of Friends."

AMUSEMENTS

"JIM, THE PENMAN," AT THE REGENT TODAY AND TOMORROW
John Mason, in a thrilling photograph adaptation of Sir Charles L. Kings world-renowned drama, "Jim, the Penman," the heart-gripping story of the great forger who ate for love and whose afterlife is one of remorse and retribution, will be shown at the Regent today and tomorrow.

Mr. Mason portrays with great force and dramatic discretion the title character, the man whose clever pen works so much harm even to his most dearly loved, and which finally writes with his heart's blood, his own punishment. With overpowering motives and situations, and a series of tense climaxes, "Jim, the Penman" is one of the most stage successes of the present dramatic era. The unqualified triumph which it has scored throughout the entire world was a tribute to its dramatic power and thrilling realism.

To-day will also be shown "Pathe News" (depicting the world's current events), Thursday and Friday—Paramount Trail Series advertisement.

AT THE MAJESTIC
To-night marks the closing performance of the Majestic's splendid opening vaudeville bill. The Avon Comedy Four, headed by much loved bringer of the Majestic face back to earth, and little Marion Weeks, the cute little singer, and all the rest of the clever performers, will leave the Majestic after to-night's two performances to make way for the offering to-night of another of the fine artists of the Majestic's opening bill is Master Gabriel, the celebrated midget actor, of "Buster Brown" fame, who with fine comedy, presents a playlet abounding with rich comedy and much human interest. The program that in every way will measure up to the opening bill is booked to appear for the last half of the night. It comprises the Wharry-Lewis Four, three girls and a man, in a beautiful vocal and instrumental set; Cantor and his comedians of musical comedy fame, who were great favorites at the Phoenix; Cummins and Seiam, vaudeville's best comic-comedy tumbler; Walter Brower, presenting a novel comedy monologue; and the Three English Girls, offering a madcap dancing turn. Splendid features in moving pictures will also be included in the program.—Advertisement.

PAXTANG PARK

Early in prices prevail with all the concessions and amusements at the park to-day. For a dime you can have a ride on the roller coaster that will entitle you to a ride on the merry-go-round, a ride on the roller-coaster, a ride on the roller coaster, an ice cream cone. There will also be races and contests with suitable prizes for the little folks.

The park theater this week is one of the best of the season. The Milan Opera Troupe is fast attracting attention. It is a grand opera as it is sung by real artists, this is the act you want to see. On Monday we have a grand opera. It responded to a half dozen encores and then the audience was not satisfied and clamored for another act. The act ranks with the best operatic acts that have played the town. The balance of the show is a splendid attraction.

The beautiful Lillian Walker, featured in "Hearts and the Highway," a picture of the romantic novel of that name by the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, is at the Colonial to-day and tomorrow.

The roguish Miss Walker, with her dimples and charm, turns rogue indeed in "Hearts and the Highway," which is a tale of those rollicking old days of the stagecoach and the nimble sword during the reign of James II of England. This is a smashing opening—and this statement is literal as well as figurative—the soldiers of the king breaking a door and slaying Earl of Clanranald under arrest for conspiracy. Situations of comedy and drama alternate as when his daughter—Miss Lillian herself—determines to array herself in man's garb and intercept the messenger conveying the warrant of death to the king for his signature. When she stops the king's messenger, she brings about her own undoing, but that's no misfortune—she captivates the handsome young officer and off they go to Edinburgh to defy the king.

PRESIDENT OF D. & H. WANTS U. S. PREPARED

L. F. Loree Will Encourage Employees of His Company to Assist Government

Philadelphia, Sept. 1.—Following the announcement yesterday of the practical interest taken by the Pennsylvania Railroad in the subject of national preparedness comes a telegram from L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad Company, giving assurance that his company stands ready to open the way for employees to acquire military training. The Pennsylvania Railroad, through recently issued instructions to heads of departments on lines east of Pittsburgh, has made it possible for upward of 100,000 employees to offer their services to the government. The Delaware and Hudson Company, according to President Loree, will gladly facilitate national defense plans by affording to the thousands of employees of its road every possible opportunity for military service.

Vice-presidents of all Pennsylvania lines east of Pittsburgh have instructed heads of departments to the effect that any employee entitled to two weeks' vacation may have an extended furlough of two extra weeks for the purpose of joining a camp for military instruction, provided the department can spare him. As an additional encouragement to the men who thus volunteer for a period of military training, the company will furnish free transportation to and from instruction camps.

President Loree's announcement follows:

New York, Aug. 31.—I am greatly impressed with the vital necessity of making adequate preparation to protect the interests of this country during the European conflict and especially immediately at its close. We shall be glad to facilitate at any time the action of any of our employees who desire to offer their service to the government.

L. F. LOREE,
President Delaware and Hudson Railroad Company.
