Student Places Class Flag on High Stack at Annville

Special to The Telegraph
Annville, Pa., Sept. 10.—Yesterday morning the annual poster scrap between the freshmen and sophomore classes at Lebanon Valley College ended with no advantage gained by either side.

With the townspeople and students watching the attempt of two sophomores and one freshman trying to place their banner on the top of the 100-foot high smoke stack of the heating plant, Leroy Mackert, of Sunbury, a freshman, scaled the stack and, fighting the sophomores on the top rung, succeeded in placing his class flag on the top.

STUDENTS TO CHANGE SCHOOL SESSIONS

Prof. Dibble Will Let Them Decide; New Move Would Be Great Advantage to Athletes

A new arrangement for a change of sessions every ten weeks instead of every four weeks is now being discussed at Central High school. The new plan as presented to the student body by Professor Howard G. Dibble yesterday will provide for change of sessions only four times a year instead of ten times, as has been done.

In offering this plan, Professor Dibble pointed out as a great advantage the fact that athletes would not have to change sessions every four weeks and thus no doubt better work could be done by them in their studies and eliminate the danger of their being barred from athletic contests on account of low standing.

Professor Dibble stated that he would be especially strict in this respect and that all athletes must stand well in their studies. The question of the new change has been put entirely into the hands of the student body and will be considered until some day next week when a vote will be taken of the entire school to decide whether or not this change shall be made.

Orchestra candidates have been called out and a large number are expected to report. A meeting of the High School Argus board will be held in the near future and the subscriptions will be taken within the next few days.

Big Increase in Mail Handled in Harrisburg

From present indications the amount of mail handled at the local Post Office during the present year will exceed that of former years by many thousands of pounds. The increase in the parcel post business is partly responsible although first and second class matter is making a big gain over former years. Within the last month a million catalogues from a New York mail order house have been distributed in Central Pennsylvania. Another large commitment is due from a Middle West firm. With the launching of the Fall advertising campaigns by local industrial and business concerns the amount is expected to take another big jump.

Plans and specifications for the new addition and improvements to the Post Office have been received by Postmaster Frank C. Sites from Washington. Several contractors have already inspected them. Bidders will be required to place bids on the entire job. Eighteen months is specified as the time limit on the work.

PORCH PARTY AT ANNVILLE

Special to The Telegraph
Annville, Pa., Sept. 10.—Miss Josephine Ulrich entertained her friends with a porch party this afternoon preparatory to leaving for Wellesley College. The following guests were present: Miss Helen Brightbill, Miss Ora Bachman, Miss Mary Wyand, Elizabeth, Md.; Miss Blanche Welmer, of Lebanon; Miss Edith Lehman and Miss Florence Critchson, of Annville.

ELIJAH SUFFERED FROM LONELINESS

Was a Knight Errant of God, Who Gave Him an Object Lesson

(By William T. Ellis.)

Literature is full of dramatic contrasts, because it is a reflection, even though inadequate, of real life. An up-to-date writer of scenarios, "novelists" could scarcely devise a more unlikely situation than that in which this week's lesson finds Elijah, the man who had lent a king to his will, filled the eye of a nation, and, in the most dramatic religious combat of all history, had defeated the heathen priests. His prayer had brought fire from heaven, and his prayer had ended the long and bitter drought of three years. The accolade of God had been on his shoulder.

Now we see him running away from a vindictive woman! In the mood of spiritual exaltation which had followed the spectacular victory of Mount Carmel, Elijah, reconciled to the convicted and converted king, headed before his chariot all the way to Jezebel, a feat possible only to such a hardy and conditioned physical as he. He was a desert-dweller. Doubtless, in a vague way, Elijah assumed that now the worship of Jezebel would be restored at the palace. What great plans of re-establishing the honor of God in Israel thronged his brain as he rode across the desert.

Both king and prophet, however, had reckoned without the woman in the case. Jezebel would be converted by the dramatic trial by fire, he little knew Jezebel. More than most women, that arch-enemy, Elijah, she could not withhold the treat that, "As surely as you are Elijah and I am Jezebel, may the gods do to me what they will, if I do not make your life as the life of one of them by tomorrow about this time." A nice, lady-like sentiment that!

The prophet who had confronted a hostile king and made a nation of traitors and easy assurance, collapsed as this woman's fury. The narrative succinctly says: "He was afraid and arose and went for his life." Discouraged, despairing and seemingly defeated, Elijah resumed his exile, and fled south across country to far Beersheba. Public speakers can understand his mood. Often a man has overcome the loneliness of his hotel to "eat bitterness," as the Chinese say, in the full assurance that life is not worth living. This was for Elijah the "preacher's blue Monday." It was a "day after."

Out from Beersheba the prophet went, taking to the desert in his train a few naturally wild birds to his nest or a fox to its hole, and sitting down under a juniper tree (probably the bromeliad plant) afraid that he might die. The blue devils of discouragement had him on the run. It was not until he was ready to quit. What a succession of Elijahs have met under that juniper tree! It is one of the most popular vacation resorts on earth, although no place is worse for the health.

Now what Elijah thought was a spiritual experience was primarily a matter of physical health. He needed sleep and a square meal, which God gave him, rather than a lecture on unbelief. Many a minister since has had his blues cured in the same way, though the wise angel of providence and the food was his wife. Happy is the leader who can find refreshment after exceptional toil in a fishing trip, a golf course, or a tramp through the woods. Elijah needed relaxation for his nerve strain and he needed to go apart where his vision of relative values would be clearer. Cheer up, Elijah; you are not a coward because you have let your body and the whip hand of God. You should sequester yourself quietly for a fresh revelation of the mind of God.

In an ideal state of Christian organization we shall take better care of our physical health. We will pursue a "day after" ministry, providing cheer for the lonely man who the night before inspired a multitude. Every convention might have a confidential "cheer-up committee" to show appreciation to speakers. It is rare for a man to receive even newspaper reports of his addresses, as he goes from place to place; and letters of thanks are infrequent. One in Baltimore a man spoke to a meeting of laymen; and the next day he received a telegram from a minister in dozens of men, thanking him for his address. I know of no parallel for that in our country.

With a hearty meal under his leather apron, and with his frazzled nerves cooled by wine and repeated sleep, the prophet turned his back on the juniper tree and started on a desert journey. He needed to die and departed. Instead, he wanted to be up and doing. So he set forth to the southeast, for the mountains of Sinai. This transforming experience which he had undergone on Mount Carmel turned his back to the mountains of Sinai, the God's presence, Horeb, or Sinai, where the law had been given. He would go into the wilderness, if anywhere, Elijah must get his message from God. To him the sparse camel thorn, the flinty gray desert, the distant red rocks, were beautiful as his native air. Horeb, rather than in palaces, was his home. In the wilderness, if anywhere, Elijah must get his message from God. To him the sparse camel thorn, the flinty gray desert, the distant red rocks, were beautiful as his native air. Horeb, rather than in palaces, was his home. In the wilderness, if anywhere, Elijah must get his message from God. To him the sparse camel thorn, the flinty gray desert, the distant red rocks, were beautiful as his native air.

All the while, Elijah was suffering with the familiar prophet malady, loneliness. He saw too much of himself. He was growing unconscious as he attacked him. He needed a newspaper, and intercourse with fellow servants of God. The prophet who keeps out of touch with his fellows sins against his own soul. Sam Jones once said to a group of his hearers: "You sisters are dear old things, but you are not posted." He did not know what God was doing, or what forces the Lord had under His hand. He was a lonely Christian's faith would be rejuvenated by attendance upon a religious convention or conference. There can be too much of any good thing, and there was too much of the wilderness for Elijah; for he himself bulked too large in the landscape.

There is implied rebuke in the simple fact that the prophet, who had himself been given an object lesson of God's greatness, had himself to be taught an object lesson. For Elijah had no sooner settled comfortably in his cave than the voice of Jehovah came to him, saying, lovingly, as it were, "How about it, Elijah? What now?"

Whereupon the unconscious egotism of a strong man, the spirit of his own and in his work burst forth. "I have been very jealous for the Lord God of Israel for the children of Israel have forsaken Thy covenant, thrown down

Regularly Good For 24 Years

Thinne altars, and slain Thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away."
That sounds familiar. It seems to me I have often heard that gringish, pariah-like, "I, even I only, am left," a good many times. There are whole groups of us Christians who have so little sense of proportion—or of humor—that we think the Lord would be in a sorry way if it were not for us. We are sure the Church as well as the times are decadent and that we few are the saving remnant. Which means that we are not "posted"; our ego has got in front of our eyesight, hindering our vision.
Bidding the self-centered prophet stand on the mount, God gave him an object lesson, which has passed into a familiar figure of speech. In succession there passed by a mighty wind, an earthquake and a fire, but the Lord was not in any of them. Then came the still, small voice, and lo, that was the voice of God. Now, as then and ever, the mightiest influences are the quietest—the growth of the vegetable kingdom, the shining of the sun, the rise of the tides, the development of the human will and mind. There are purposes to-day forming, all unsuspected, in individual human hearts which may eventually mean more to the world than this great war itself. The voice of the spirit of God is heard by the nearest person, but it is the greatest force in the universe.
The picturesque beyond most figures is that of the knight errant, riding alone to champion whatever wrongs he may encounter. Elijah was a sort of knight errant of God. He wandered alone. A wilderness type, he felt no need of people. Now, in Mount Horeb, he was given his lesson. God's type of a good servant is not the knight errant, which has passed into a familiar figure of speech. So the startlingly practical message that came to Elijah from the Mount was to this effect, "Go back among

Small-Size Tires Enlarged 20%

Sizes 30 x 3½ and 30 x 3

Goodyear tires won top place by giving more than others. For that reason alone these tires for years have outsold any rival. This year we are giving to users of small tires three more costly extras. Now Goodyear tires in these sizes, more than ever before, excel any like-size tire.

3 More Extras
We have added 20 per cent to the air capacity. Added size, as you know, adds mileage. We have added 30 per cent more rubber to the side walls—to the part above the rim. That's where constant bending breaks a thin-walled tire. We have made new molds of a new design which adds endurance, we have found.

Lower Prices
These new extras alone, on this year's output, will cost us $317,000. They will save our users ten times that, perhaps.
Yet this year we made another big price reduction. It was our third in two years, totaling 45 per cent. That's one result of mammoth output—a value no one else can give.
Even in size 30x3, in Goodyear, you get a four-ply tire. In our All-Weather tread, you get a double-thick anti-skid. Now you get this extra size and extra strength. More than ever you owe yourself the use of Goodyear tires. No other make compares with them in low average cost per mile. A half-million users have proved that.
