Greenwood, Miss., this morning and made a complete alibi, which cleared him entirely. Everything Points to Negro The police are putting through the third degree the negro house boy, who early discovered a stream of smoke coming from the apartment known as the Benham Flat occupied by Miss Favar. He is said to have seen an-other negro leaving the house just be-fore he noticed the smoke. All the methods used, the police say, point to a negro as the slayer. The skulls of both bodies were crushed with a ham-mer secured from a garage in the rear of the house. Blood was scattered throughout the room and when the apartment was broken into the bodies of both victims were partially burned. Crowell's friends in Greenwood claim he always carried considerable money with him. This report caused the po-lice for a time to advance a theory that robbery might have been the real cause of the killing, but it was doubted when it became known that Officers Kehoe and Davis ascertained that the woman still wore part of her jewelry. The mar's diamond stud was in his tie. While some evidence of robbery was discovered it is believed the assassin ransacked the place for other things besides jewelry or money. Yet the police say no money was found in Crowell's pockets and but fifteen cents in the dead woman's purse. When firemen burst open the door and fought their way through the smoke they stumbled over Crowell's body in a pool of blood with deep wounds on his head and his throat cut from ear to ear.
