PHILLIES CLINCH FLAG IF THEY WIN FROM BRAVES TODAY; RACE FOR FOURTH PLACE

Philadelphia, Sept. 29.—One more victory and it will be all over but the world's series, and it is more than likely that this one more victory will be accomplished this afternoon at the Braves Field, with the great Alexander officiating, and all Fitchburg present to do honor to Patrick J. Moran.

Yesterday's victory over Brooklyn put the Dodgers out of it, mathematically as well as actually, and it really saves only one more win to put the Phils the conclusive distance ahead of the Braves. They are now seven games ahead of the Braves with seven more game to play. They are eight and one-half in front of the Dodgers.

One thing one is inclined not to notice in the National League race, with all eyes intent on the top of the ladder, and that is the close race among the Western teams and New York for fourth place.

This vacancy in the first division is being contested for harder than most pennants. Five teams have a chance for it, and a quick glance at the percentage table will reveal that only 11 points separate the entire five teams.

Pittsburgh, in fourth, is only a game and a half ahead of New York, in last. That means that if it were possible for New York to beat Pittsburgh in both games of a double-header to-day with St. Louis, Chicago and Cincinnati not playing, to-night's percentage table would show New York in fourth and Pittsburgh in the case, score 5 to 1.

Less than a point separates Pittsburgh and Chicago.
