JUSTICE ELKIN DIES SUDDENLY

'The Plowboy of Indiana County' Succumbs After Abdominal Operation

JUSTICE JOHN P. ELKIN

Philadelphia, Oct. 4.—Justice John P. Elkin, of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, died at 10.40 o'clock last night in the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital. Death was caused by a disease of the liver, the exact nature of which has not been disclosed by the physicians in attendance.

Justice Elkin had been in the hospital for more than two weeks, having been taken there on September 18, when an operation was performed without giving him relief. Up to a few minutes before his death the justice was conscious.

The medical men declared a condition of the liver had arisen which they were absolutely powerless to help. From the time of the exploratory operation no new developments had taken place to aid them in saving the life of Justice Elkin. Drs. Ernest LaPlace, James M. Anders and Lewis Brinton, the latter the personal physician of the Elkin family, held the final consultation and decided upon the hopelessness of the case.

Plowboy of Indiana The announcement of the death of Justice Elkin, or "The Plowboy of Indiana County," by which title he was best known throughout the State, came as a shock to his many friends and acquaintances, who had been given to understand that his condition was serious, but not critical. In fact, only a few days ago it had been said that he would leave the hospital shortly.

Accompanied by his wife, Justice Elkin came to Philadelphia about a month ago. He stopped at the Rittenhouse Hotel, where reports became current that he was seriously ill. This was denied and the jurist appeared in the lobby several times to prove that he was well. But Dr. Brinton was at the hotel frequently and finally he held a conference with other medical experts that resulted in the judge being taken to the hospital. On September 18 an operation was performed. It was in the nature of an exploratory one and did not result in any satisfactory action. Justice Elkin was supposed to be improving.

Wife at Bedside Throughout the days following Mrs. Elkin remained at the bedside of her husband although herself unwell from the strain. She was joined in a few days by her son and later by a married daughter. When the attending physicians realized on Saturday just how serious was the condition of the patient, another daughter who was at the Elkin home in Indiana, Pa., was informed by telephone. Immediately she started her journey to this city, finally arriving in Broad Street Station shortly after her father died.

Ill For a Year Until a few days before he came to Philadelphia, Justice Elkin insisted on carrying out his official duties, although he had been unwell for almost a year and had been steadily losing weight. He refused to surrender to the inroads of the ailment which slowly sapped away his vitality. Few of his friends realized that for some time he had kept up simply by sheer nerve.

Justice Elkin is best known for the fight he made for the nomination for Governor of the State against former Governor Pennypacker. Despite the opposition of Senator Quay and other leaders of the Republican party, the "Plowboy of Indiana county" came close to landing the nomination he sought. In fact, it was thought at first that he had won. It was shortly afterwards, in 1904, that he was appointed to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

Justice Elkin was about 55 years old, having been born in Indiana county, where he has always resided. After having been graduated from the law department of the University of Michigan, in 1884, he was admitted to the bar of Indiana county. Previous to his law course young Elkin had taught in the country schools of the county. Almost as soon as he began the practice of law, at 24 years of age, he was nominated and elected to the State House of Representatives. He served two terms, and from that time was prominent in State affairs in the Republican party. For four years,

Try this easy way to clear your skin with Resinol Soap

Bathe your face for several minutes with Resinol Soap and warm water, working the creamy lather into the skin gently with the finger-tips. Then wash off with more Resinol Soap and warm water, finishing with a dash of clear cold water to close the pores.

Do this once or twice a day, and you will be astonished how quickly the healing, antiseptic Resinol medication soothes and cleanses the pores, removes pimples and blackheads, and leaves the complexion clear, fresh and velvety.

If the skin is in bad condition through neglect or an unwise use of cosmetics, apply a little Resinol Ointment* and let it remain on ten minutes before the final washing with Resinol Soap.

Resinol Soap is not artificially colored, its rich brown being entirely due to the Resinol balsam it contains. Sold by all druggists and dealers in toilet goods. For free sample cake and trial of Resinol Ointment, write Dept. 3-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

*Physicians have prescribed Resinol Ointment for over twenty years in the treatment of skin and scalp affections.

Cobean Store at Pinegrove Entirely Destroyed by Fire

Carlisle, Pa., Oct. 4. — About 3:30 o'clock yesterday morning fire broke out in the general store of C. H. Cobean, at Pinegrove, and entirely destroyed the building and a small garage adjoining. Mr. Cobean occupied the building as a dwelling and business place. He was awakened by the barking of his dog and discovered that the fire, which started in the store, had gained such headway that it could not be checked.

Very little was saved from the house and Mr. Cobean's loss will reach about $2,000. The buildings were owned by the State, being located on the forestry reserve. The house, known as the Old Mansion, which was in possession of the Filler family for many years, not far from the fire, was on fire several times, but was saved by men of the forestry department, who went to the scene and rendered able assistance. The building is temporarily occupied by Oscar Barber, whose dwelling was burned in the big forest fires last Spring.

INVENTION PRODUCES MUSIC FROM LIGHT

New York, Oct. 4.—Dr. Lee De Forest announced yesterday that he had made electric lights play music far surpassing the best efforts of any orchestra. "The music of the lamps," he called it. Dr. De Forest is one of the pioneers in the development of wireless telegraphy.
