AMUSEMENTS YOUNG MEN WHO WORK WILL WIN

Wharton Students Told of Many Open Places in Business World. Company Headed by Frances Starr Capably Presents Edward Knoblauch's New Play

The latest of Edward Knoblauch's plays, "Marie-Odile," a play in three acts, was presented last night at the Orpheum before a moderately sized audience. The play, staged by David Belasco, gave to this city the opportunity to appreciate the artist's brutality upon an order that has for protegee, Frances Starr. Well remembered to theatrical goers for her work in the case of "Becky," Miss Starr has added materially in this new vehicle to her former successes.

In a play of the type of "Marie-Odile" one does not assume the responsibility of broadly generalizing, for both the text as written by the author and the presentation of the text by the players itemize separate consideration. Two names assure beyond a doubt the presentation of anything they attempt. A Belasco show invariably means that the presentation is one wherein absolutely nothing that can attribute to the artist's effectiveness and correctness of the minutest detail has been overlooked. And the name of Frances Starr carries with it the knowledge that whatever the role attempted, that role will be artistically and dramatically portrayed. Just so with "Marie-Odile" the most careful provided not only an artist to interpret the character, but has surrounded her with a company that is in every way thoroughly artistic and capable in their respective parts. And for detail of strict adherence to the ritual and customs surrounding the characters of the play Belasco has lived up to his reputation of being the most careful and artistic producing manager of his day.

Magazines and periodicals of the country have given so much space to the story of the play that it can be overlooked in a review at this time. As for the play itself, that must be a matter for everyone's personal thought and decision. But many of our so-called "phases of life" have been flaunted upon our stage, all of them viewed and reviewed with thoughts many in number as compared to the subjects presented, but that does not in any way justify the questionings of another mind. "Marie-Odile" in text is a matter for ethical discussion, and in the presentation of the play one may talk about the fact that occurrences such as happen in the play might happen in everyday life, or might happen under conditions of stress, would not in any way convince another mind that those things should be presented for the entertainment or for the uplift of a theatergoing public.

"Marie-Odile" in text is a beautiful story, charming because of its innocence and simplicity; but one finds it rather hard to conceive that men, under no matter what condition they are laboring, should assume an attitude of brutality upon an "order" that has for a thousand years stood as the exemplification of the highest and noblest in womanhood. "Marie-Odile" will be to every one of its hearers just what he chooses to think about the story and the situations in which this young novice finds herself placed because of a little act of willful disobedience.

MAX ROBERTSON. "Stop That Man" is the name of a piece just secured for immediate production. The play is by George Hobart and William Semple, and is characterized as being "something different."

George Arliss, he of "Disraeli" fame will have a new vehicle this year. This time it will be "Paganini," a play based upon the life of the Italian and his visit to London when he was about fifty years old. Margery Maude, daughter of Cyril Maude will be seen in the same production.

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson has returned to this country with a company of fifty players with whom he will make a theatrical tour of the Southern States. Laura Cowie will head his company.

MOTION PICTURES The Famous Players will film "Madame Butterfly." Mary Pickford will have the part of Cho-Cho-San.

Before the end of the year it is promised by the Universal Company that they will show simultaneously in this city two of their latest productions. Their two great stars, Anna Pavlova and Sarah Bernhardt. The films of both the stars have been completed, but out of courtesy to Pavlova who is at present filming her contract at the Lexington theater, the films will be withheld until her contract is completed. Pavlova appears in "The Dumb Girl of Portici" and Bernhardt appears in "Jean Dore."

Production of "The Red Widow," the Paramount's new film, has been halted awaiting the recovery of John Barrymore, who recently strained a ligament.

TONIGHT "UNDER COVER" "Under Cover" Roy Cooper Megrue's modern mystery melodrama of the metropolitan smart set, the secret service and the underworld, which broke all records for long runs the past season in New York, Boston and Chicago, will be presented by Selwyn & Co. Company, the firm that also produced "Twin Beds," "The Show Stopper" and "Under Cover" at the Orpheum to-night. "Under Cover" is a melodrama of the newer fashion and follows the fortunes and twists of a shrewdly fought duel between certain smugglers and the secret service men, who are on their tracks.—Advertisement.

"MUTT AND JEFF IN COLLEGE" Opening at the Orpheum Thursday, for an engagement of one day, Gus Hill will present for the first time, the fourth edition of Bud Fisher's great cartoon series, Mutt and Jeff, entitled "Mutt and Jeff in College." After breaking all established theatrical records for volume of business and pleasing humor, the new production will offer an entirely new entertainment for the coming season, retaining nothing but the best of the two character comedies, "A Mutt" and his little friend, Othello Montgomery. "I have just seen a remarkable play in the world, that Mutt and Jeff cartoons, and I know the play of the same name, are the most remarkable successes in the history of the press and the theatricals.—Advertisement.

SOUR STOMACH. When vegetable food ferments it causes gas rising in the throat, the formation of gas in the stomach which distends it and causes pain often extending to the region of the heart and arousing fear of a heart disease. This condition is called acid dyspepsia. Heartburn, a name applied to a pain in the pit of the stomach, with palpitation of the heart, results from acid dyspepsia.

Proof? Certainly! Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 29, 1915. Editor: The Harrisburg Telegraph. Dear Sir— Advertisements, almost identical, were placed by me in the TELEGRAPH and another Harrisburg paper. I received a total of eleven replies and everyone greeted me with "I saw your ad in THE HARRISBURG EVENING TELEGRAPH" and not one mentioned the other paper. I sold my goods at my own price, although I had but three days to do so, as I am moving from the city. I incidentally learned that it pays to advertise in Harrisburg in the Evening Telegraph. Yours respectfully, M. D.
