

WOMEN AND THEIR INTERESTS

The Marriage Trail

By DOROTHY DIX

"I notice that a rich society spinster has been giving an interview in which she advises girls to hit the matrimonial trail," remarked the Bookkeeper.

"I don't observe that she takes her own advice," retorted the Stenographer. "People never do," assented the Bookkeeper.

"I've seen the matrimonial trail that I have ever met were old bachelors and spinsters. They advise the holy estate, and the domestic bliss stuff, while the folks who have gone through the matrimonial mill look about as battered up and as enthusiastic as Jack Johnson did when Jess Willard got through with him."

"There's a lot of difference between theory and practice," observed the Stenographer. "And one of the reasons that old maid is so strong for matrimony is because they haven't tried it, and haven't got any facts to the contrary to jolt them out of their dream about vine-wreathed cots, and little faces at the windowpane, and a sturdy masculine arm on which a woman can lean and be protected from the cruel world."

"And it's the same way with those who get married. They advise you to stay single, because when they think of all the trials and tribulations of trying to stretch a one-horsepower income over a forty-horsepower family circle it looks to them as if anybody had just deliberately gone out of their way to hunt up trouble who gets married."

"You bet," responded the Bookkeeper. "our kind friends hang out plenty of danger signals on both divisions of the road."

"That's right," agreed the Stenographer. "when I go to see my Aunt Mary, who is a spin with a good income, and a nice little home of her own, everything is so comfortable and quiet, and she's so free and independent that I think the bachelor girl life is the only life for me. But Aunt Mary won't have it. Cut it out, child," she says, "an old maid's home is the abomination of desolation and loneliness. Get married and have children. That's the Heaven on Earth for a woman."

"Then I go to see my sister, Mamie, who is married, and has a grouchy husband, and five small children, and lives in an uproar that makes her house sound like a combination boiler factory and insane asylum. And Mamie is thin, and nerve wrecked, and shabby, and overworked, and never has a penny of her own, and she says, 'Be warned by me and stay single. Take it from me that any girl who has got a good job and her own pocketbook is the wise dame who freezes on to them.'"

"It's a case of pay your money and trust to luck," said the Bookkeeper grimly. "Whoever way you do, you will wish you had done the other."

"In the face of all the evidence, I wonder why people continue to marry?" the Stenographer said, speculatively.

"It's the sporting blood," returned the Bookkeeper. "It's because matrimony is the biggest gamble on earth that we all want to take a flier in it. 'And because its capital prize is the best and biggest thing on earth, and we all have an inextinguishable hope that we will be the fortunate one who will draw it.'"

"Right-o," assented the Bookkeeper. "Well, so far as I'm concerned," said the Stenographer, "I think I shall imitate the aforesaid spinster's notable example. I shall stand safe and sound on the bank, and urge other people to take the plunge by telling them that the water is fine."

FOR THE SCHOOL GIRLS

A Smart Frock that can be Made with or without the Skirt Yoke.

By MAY MANTON

8754 Girl's Dress, with or without Yoke, 8 to 14 years.

Plaited skirts are always becoming to little girls. In this case, the skirt may be made with or without the yoke but whenever it is becoming, it is well that it should be used. The blouse that completes the dress is a very simple one, closed at the back, yet with a little chemisette effect at the front that is new and exceedingly smart. In the picture, soldiers' blue gabardine is trimmed with black braid and the chemisette is of ivory white broadcloth with small pearl buttons, but one could copy this dress in many different materials. Girls will wear linen, cotton poplin and other washable materials of the sort for many weeks to come and it would be exceedingly charming made of any one of these and could be trimmed with either braid or with contrasting material. There are wool crepes that are charming for girls' wear, and the poplin weaves are to be used this season and there is altogether a most interesting variety. The rolling collar leaves the neck just open for comfort; the sleeves may be made in either three-quarter or in full length. For the 12 year size will be needed 3 3/4 yds. of material 27 in. wide, 5 yds. 3/4, 4 1/4 yds. 44 with 4 1/2 yds. of braid. The pattern No. 8754 is cut in sizes from 8 to 14 years. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

England Must Raise $2,115,000,000 to Help Allies Continue War

By Associated Press London, Oct. 14.—A great national campaign of private economy was urged by Sir George Paish, in an address which he virtually no exports so we must help her. In addition we must provide for Belgium, Serbia and other powers.

"The result of all this is that for the current year we must find, outside our own expenditures, 423,000,000 pounds ($2,115,000,000) for our allies. In England content to go on living as if today? Money is being squandered on all sides with the result perhaps, that later our allies may come to us for money and we shall not have the means to support them."
