PAT MORAN IS NOW FREE AGENT

Contract Expires; No Effort to Resign Him Says Philadelphia Sport Writer

According to James P. Isaminger, sport writer on the Philadelphia North American, Patrick Moran has not signed a contract for next season. This, it is said, is causing much worriment among baseball fans in Phila-delphia. The Quaker scribe says:

The statement that he put his signa-ture to a document in the Phils' office late last week was absolutely without discussed.

Since the close of the world's series President Baker has seen Moran on numerous occasions, but the question of signing for 1916 has never been discussed.

By winning the National League pennant this year, Moran stunned the entire baseball world.

Moran's Contract

Probably no championship won in years has been more of a manager's personal triumph than Moran's victory this year, and his feat stamped him as one of the greatest tacticians in the game.

Moran's contract expired on October Moran's contract expired on October 15, and he is free to sign with any club in the two major leagues. While it is inconceivable that the owners of the Phils would affront the fans by letting the only man who ever captured a pennant for the Phillies slip away, the leisurely policy the owners have adopted in regard to his reappointment is a matter of some concern.

Of course Moran will not manage the Phils in 1916 for the same money he received in 1915 or anything like it. He worked for a nominal salary this year and the stockholders, who were enriched to the extent of $71,000 in the world's series alone because of Moran's generalship and ability, will have to come across with an adequate salary to hold him.

Moran has every fan in the city at his feet and is in the position of naming his own terms. To be turned down by the club would mean the ruin of the Phils.

LINCOLN GRAMMAR SCHOOL WINS

Lincoln Grammar School eleven yesterday defeated Hamilton team; score, 18 to 6. The game was played at Fifteenth and Herr streets. Beck and Thomas were Lincoln stars. Wiltzbaugh, the "fifteen-year-old mountain," played the best game for Hamilton. This boy weighs, 190 pounds.

Lebanon Valley Scrubs Bump Varsity Team Hard Special to The Telegraph

Annville, Pa., Oct. 21.—On account of the soggy condition of the field and the wet ball, the long workout given by Coach R. J. Guyer to his Lebanou Valley football squad yesterday after-noon was very strenuous.

The scrubs showed a decided brace in their mode of attack. Two touch-downs were registered by the second string men and time after time the varsity players were hurled back for big losses when on the offensive typical Englishman on his way back from Jamaica to join his regiment, to an American school teacher traveling for the summer. Parenthetically, it may be remarked that if you want to spot a real hypocrite, pick the person who says that he or she wouldn't like to see anything so brutal as a bull fight. True, the civilized man, whose idea of sport is a fair contest, may be disgusted after he gets there, but there is something atavistic left in each of us to which this primitive exhibition irresistibly appeals.

Lebanon Valley has been fortunate in securing Jack Ozar, the husky Greek athlete formerly of the University of Indiana. Jack is a middle versity of Indiana. Jack is a middle-weight champion wrestler and with Guyer's assistance will organize a wrestling team the coming winter season. He is showing fast form on the football field and is expected to play a tackle position in the game with Dickinson on Saturday.

So even the school marm from Ohio was disappointed in the first bull. He was obviously a creature of domestic rather than pugnacious temperament. When the big coffee-colored and rather poorly banderillero, who looked like a shabby edition of Henry VIII, gracefully put the beribboned barbs into the animal's shoulders, he appeared amazed and insulted, but not at all angry. He absolutely refused to charge anyone under any circumstances. So they gave him up as a bad job and the boys drove him out with rocks. The second bull took one look at the crowd, felt the prickle of cold steel in his shoulders and decided that the game was too rough for him. He hurled the runway, ran back into the corrai and refused to play under any circumstances.

By this time, all of the spectators were convinced there want grown to the runway, ran back into the corral and refused to play under any circumstances.

By this time, all of the spectators were convinced there wasn't going to be any bull fight at all, but the third bull was a surprise. He made a flying jump through the gate and caught a bystander with one horn. Then he chased everybody out of the ring except the Panamanian Henry VIII. This bold gentleman proved himself to be really a bull fighter of talent. He planted the banderillas in the bull's shoulders and wore him out with futile charges at a gracefully firted cape. At last the bull was staggering with exhaustion. The matador came forward with his sword. The school teacher from Ohio covered her face with her handkerchief; the young Englishman remarked that it was a bum sort of sport; the Panamanians leaned far out from their seats, shouting and gesticulating with excitement.

One Good Stroke

One Good Stroke

Meantime, the matador had maneuvered until he had exactly the right position, and drove the sword in just behind the shoulder and through the lung. It was considered a great stroke. Box and gallery went wild with applause, and the young bloods showered the successful matador with their headgear. There was something peculiarly grotesque about the spectacle of a lot of excited natives throwing two dollar American straw hats at a shabby matador, while the ill-treated bull staggered and coughed his life out.

Such is the Panamanian bull fight, and it is a pleasure to note that it is rapidly falling from its high estate; for, as the Yankee has more than once gone to the bull fight, so the coming generation in Panama has experimented with basehell and found.
