AMUSEMENTS

MARY PICKFORD

The Paramount Pictures Corporation now has in preparation a screen play based on the most popular of operas, "Madame Butterfly, Mary Pickford will be seen in the title role of "Cho Cho San."—Advertisement.

ORPHEUM Monday evening, October 25—Melba. Thursday, evening only, October 28.—Madame Butterfly, Mary Pickford. Friday, evening and night, October 29.—"Uncle Tom's Cabin."

GREAT SINGERS OF A CENTURY The nineteenth century has justly been called the century of wonders for in one hundred years the world advanced materially, more than it had, almost in one hundred centuries preceding. In the Fine Arts music flourished in the nineteenth century as there are no signs of its flourishing in the twentieth. Consequently, the richness of musical life, the world had a series of singers whose names are familiar to all those who love the finest manifestation of the art of music—song.

MAY ROBSON May Robson, as jolly as ever, comes to the Orpheum next Thursday evening in a revival of Anne Warner's comedy of humor and humanity, "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary." and a comedy playlet, "John Henry," based on Elizabeth Jordan's character sketches, in which she played the "rejuvenated" success of her career. Anyone who has seen the hilarious play in seasons past will not be surprised to find that the comedy of the play until its very end there is nothing but continuous roars of laughter of the side-splitting variety, with Robson, though young, creating a spell. Miss Robson, through it all, is natural and effective, and of the many comedy roles she has created none has suited her to a greater degree.—Advertisement.

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN" There has never been so lavish and adequate a production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as that which Mr. Burgess will offer amusement lovers at the Orpheum in Friday evening. The scenes, which are large enough to fill the most spacious stage, could not be so easily and so effectively arranged in the Ohio river in winter, the rocky pass in which George Harris protests his love for the young girl, the plantation, the levee at New Orleans, the cotton fields in full bloom, and the "Celestial City" are all most notable effects. Each picture the reality as closely as paint and canvas will permit and the stage perspective is so deep that the effect is exceptionally pleasing. The company is also worthy of the environment. Tom Atkins, the eminent minstrel star, offers an excellent study of "Uncle Tom."—Advertisement.

JACKIE SAUNDERS IN "REAPING THE WHIRLWIND" AT THE REGENT TODAY Jackie Saunders, in the thrilling political drama, "Reaping the Whirlwind," at the Regent to-day only.

COLONIAL TODAY The delightful five-part human interest drama called "Playing Dead," with its many interesting incidents and splendid playing, will be seen for the last time at the Colonial to-day. In many instances this Blue Ribbon Vitagraph feature is a noteworthy attraction, due mostly to the excellent, sometimes lavish detail, and the rare talent of the cast of players who appear in it. For Monday and Tuesday the management is announcing the appearance of "The Family Cupboard." This play is what might be termed a sex drama. Hobbes Bill and Frances Nelson, both recruits from the legitimate stage, are seen in the leading role. Mr. Bill is seen in the leading role. Mr. Bill's fortune in a small time. His wife, son and daughter plunge gaily into society's midst, while Nelson is left in uncomfortable solitude. He determines to have his little fling, and proceeds to hit several of Broadway's high spots. He emerges from the Wicked Way in company with a female vaudeville performer, a cabaret singer and what not. From this time an interesting climax leads to another and no end of keen interest is excited throughout its presentation.—Advertisement.

MAJESTIC VAUDEVILLE "The Pullman Porter Maids," the bright little musical comedy now appearing so successfully at the Majestic, and all the clever array of supporting Keith attractions, will leave the Walnut street playhouse after to-night's performances. Vaudeville lovers are loud in their praise of this clever bill and there are reasons to believe that the closing performances will be witnessed by capacity audiences. The act presented by Kolb and Harland is a distinct novelty and greatly enhanced by the clever work of the performers. It is in reality a satire that is both artistic and laughable. The artistic part is contributed by the artists in dances and doings when grandmother was a girl, while the comedy element is supplied by an exaggerated idea of modern dances and ideas. The "Pleasant" is a comedy sketch that

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATERS

Take Your Morning Bath in Comfort

Not only during the warmer months, but all through the hard, raw, shivery winter time. In spite of the coldest, snowiest weather, you can get full pleasure from your morning bath if you'll only get a

PERFECTION Smokeless Oil Heater

Keep it ready by your bedside, spreading its genial warmth all through your sleeping room; then, just as soon as you roll out of bed, put your Perfection in the bathroom. In less than no time this, too, will be warm—not too warm, but just right.

A Perfection Heater makes the usual winter ice-cold tiled floor but a memory. Because of recollections of past discomforts, once used this heater becomes indispensable to your comfort.

It is a perfect heating device, burns without a trace of smoke or smell. Its fuel economy is pronounced, the more so if you use Atlantic Rayolight Oil. A large one-gallon tank makes constant refilling unnecessary.

Almost any dealer will gladly demonstrate a Perfection Oil Heater. The modest price ($2.75 to $5.00) will especially please and astonish you.

Got any rusty pots or pans—so badly rusted that you feel like throwing them away? Don't. Instead, clean them with Atlantic Rayolight Oil and, as if by magic, the rust will disappear. What do you do with kerosene? If you know any real good uses, you'll enjoy reading later advertisements.

BUTTER and KEROSENE There is good butter and bad butter. So is there good and bad kerosene. You can tell the difference between butters, but what do you know about kerosene? To be sure to get the purest, best, highest grade kerosene—the kind that lasts longest, burns hottest and brightest, without smoke, soot or odor, and doesn't cost any more than the common kind, just ask your grocer for ATLANTIC Rayolight OIL of them are richly dowered in worldly goods. The bride's father, for example, may present the young couple with a few houses in Panama and a farm in the country. The groom's father will probably contribute a suitable residence and $10,000 in gold for a honeymoon. Jewelry of the ornate and elaborate sort favored by Panamanian taste will be showered upon the bride by her innumerable relatives. The young couple will usually spend several months in Europe upon their honeymoon. It is a significant fact that since the European war began most of them have been coming to the United States, and one of these interesting couples may be found upon nearly every passenger boat plying between New York and Panama.

THE PANAMA CANAL AT WORK

Thus the life of the Panamanian aristocrat is pleasant and easy. It moves in the well-worn grooves of tradition. It is filled with the pleasures of the senses and devoid of worry, hurry and excessive effort.

This opulent life of the upper class of Panama rests upon the swarming lower classes like some splendid structure built upon piles sunk deep in mire. Just as the aristocrat of Panama has everything, so the peon has nothing—neither privilege, wealth nor hope. Nearly all of the land is owned by the aristocrats; it is said that six men in Panama own nearly all of the cattle, everything worth having belongs to the ruling class. The Panamanian peon lives in a palm-thatched hut and cultivates a bit of ground rescued from the jungle. He raises plantains, bananas, yams, and catches fish from the rivers and the bay. Upon these things he lives, and he sells enough of them to pay tribute in the form of rent and taxes to his all-powerful masters.

Thus in Panama the stage seems set for a social revolution. Here is a down-trodden class, deprived of all rights and hopes, and a dominating class numerically much smaller, living on the fat of the land. The time seems ripe for a Panamanian Robespierre.

But there is not going to be any social revolution in Panama. That is one of the sure things. They have had fifty-seven so-called revolutions there, according to local historians, but none of them have been class wars. They have been fights for political "pie" between cliques of the ruling class. The dominant note of all Panamanian society is contentment, and that contentment is the key to Panamanian life. The peon is poor and always will be poor in his own right, but by nature he is one of the richest men on earth. He scratches the ground with his machete and rich tropical fruits grow up to nourish him. The jungle swarms with game and the waters with fish. The point of view of the peon was well expressed by one of them who was offered a job by an American contractor. "Why should I work? I have pants and a shirt," was the reply of this unconscious philosopher. He had named the necessities of life.

Everybody Satisfied The earth yields everything else he needs, and what he has never known he does not miss. All in Panama, from the poor peon in his hut to the wealthy landlord, are satisfied with life. And therein lies the explanation of their aversion to change and progress.

An account of the people of Panama would not be complete without mention of the San Blas Indians, one of the most remarkable primitive tribes on the hemisphere. They live in a wild tract of country in the northern part of the republic and number some 25,000. In habits they are quite primitive, coming to the United States, and entirely by fishing and trading the natural products of the jungle, while the inland tribes practice a limited agriculture. They are a sturdy, well-built people, deep-chested and broad-shouldered, with long arms and short legs, giving them a slightly grotesque appearance, but great power and activity. They are intelligent and of a high morality, being largely uncorrupted by the civilized vices.

These people share the prevailing conservatism. Their desire is to live their lives unmolested, and to keep the blood of their race pure. It has long been one of their rules that no alien could remain overnight in their villages, and this is still said to be rigidly enforced by many of the tribes.

Fearless and Independent Fearless and independent, these Indians have never acknowledged the sovereignty of the Republic of Panama. Recently, the government sent some of its representatives to the San Blas country for the purpose of promoting certain industrial developments. The Indians forthwith resented this intrusion by raising the Colombian flag. This, however, did not indicate any feeling of patriotism for the country which once owned their lands, but simply an appreciation of the fact that the Colombians had left them alone.

There are other tribes in the interior of Panama, about which very little is known. One of these is the Talamanca Indians, who are accredited with the unique practice of gambling for wives. It is said that each man entering this game puts one wife (he has several) into the pool. The contestants then stand in two rows, armed with the throwing clubs, which are their most effective native weapons. A battle of throw and dodge then starts, and continues until only one man is left standing. He gets the entire "pot" as an addition to his domestic establishment. The existence of this custom is vouched for by a number of reputable traders in Colon, who have been in the habit of getting up parties to witness this unique amusement.
