Theater Audience Laughs When Bomb Is Exploded

By Associated Press

New York, Oct. 26. — A possible panic in a London theater during the last Zeppelin raid was averted through the audience mistaking the explosion of a bomb dropped nearby for a bit of stage realism, according to Colina Cockburn, of Toronto, Canada, who arrived to-day on the steamship Tuscania from Liverpool.

Mr. Cockburn was in a theater on the night of October 13. He said a Zeppelin bomb exploded close to the theater, but an automobile on the stage had just been cranked and the audience thought it was a cleverly arranged backfire of the motor. Laughs greeted the explosion and the audience remained ignorant of the air raid until the close of the play.
