DUCK-FATHER TAKES GIRL RIDE

Tells Strange Story in Court of Witchcraft Practice in Alaska

Juneau, Alaska, Nov. 11.—That witchcraft still exists among the natives of Alaska, was brought out in the United States District Court before District Attorney J. A. Smiser here.

Beattie, superintendent of native schools for Alaska. An investigation in the Killisnoo village led Superintendent Beattie to bring a number of the tribe to Juneau for examination by District Attorney Smiser, with the result the witch was found, but no law could be found on which to base a complaint against him. From the testimony of the witnesses examined before the District Attorney the story of the witchery centers around a blind man, his fifteen-year-old daughter and her grandmother. For several months the blind man has been announcing himself as a witch and has claimed responsibility for practically all the deaths that have occurred in the village of Killisnoo for the past five years.

According to the story of the little native girl, Mary Moses, or Klantosh, as her Indian name is, the first time she knew that her father was a witch was one night a "long time ago" when she was awakened in her sleep and felt cold. She called her father and asked for more covers, which he brought, and while covering her over, she says, he told her for the first time that he was a witch and that he wanted her to learn to be one too in order that she might carry on his work when he died.

In order that she might learn the secrets of the practice she said her father told her she must visit with him an old graveyard across the bay. Mary stated her father told her to take hold of his foot and in a moment they "flew" across the channel to the cemetery. While there she said they were able to look through the earth down into the graves and could see the bodies in them. After wandering about the graves for a time her father transformed himself into a white duck and on his back she says she rode back across the channel. Mary told the District Attorney that that night she learned many things about witchcraft. The girl's story was told with straight-forwardness and without contradiction and the reason she said she wanted something done with her father was because she feared he would kill her grandmother with witchery. The child's mother is dead and she is apparently very fond of her grandmother, and is evidently sincere in her fear of her father's powers.

The only charges against her father are based upon the firm belief that he is a witch and in that connection he is accused of being responsible for everything in the way of misfortune which has happened in the Killisnoo Indian village. In the eyes of the law, Mr. Smiser says, it does look a little like hypnotism, but nothing tangible has occurred which can be reached by law. In his remarks before the District Attorney, Superintendent Beattie said: "The question of witchcraft is one of the most difficult problems we have to handle among the natives. The existence of witches is a certainty with them, and there is absolutely no possibility of convincing them that there are no such things as witches. It isn't stubbornness on their part, it is simply and sincerely their belief that there are among their tribesmen persons who have power to cast a spell over others of their number."

 matinees, and one Saturday night will bring the series to a close. The travelogues have been thoroughly enjoyed by those who have attended. "Traveloguer Roberson has lived up to his reputation of being one of the best in his field of endeavor and his pictures—both motion and colored—covering the entire world and his talks have been a source of pleasure and instruction for many who have spent night after night in front of his screen. The action of the board of education in engaging Mr. Roberson for a special series of travelogues for benefit of the school children testified to the regard in which he is held by educators in his special field. The travel-talks while entertaining and even amusing at times, are still highly instructive and leave one with a wider and better knowledge of conditions and things as they are at home and abroad. A tour in the homeland from New York to San Francisco, with stops at all places of historic, scenic and pertinent interest, has been selected as the final school matinee under the title "Beautiful America. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, the Hudson, Niagara Falls, the great central west and south, the Rocky mountains, Yellowstone Park, the Grand Canyon and California will all be included. The matinee will commence at 4:15 and end about 5:30. Although specially given for school children, the public is admitted. Admission is 10 cents, no coupons necessary. Italy is the subject Friday evening, and "London and Paris" Saturday, both being travelogues of exceptional interest. Among the well-known places to be visited in the former will be Rome, Naples, Venice, Monte Carlo, Florence, Milan and Genoa. A feature in motion pictures of unusual interest will be of Italian cavalry officers on a daring ride over the roughest country in Italy. Mr. Roberson is authority for the statement that it is the most spectacular and thrilling moving picture he has in his collection. An added attraction at each evening travelogue is a musical program by Miss Sara Lerner and Charles Mackey on the violin and piano for the three-quarters of an hour before Mr. Roberson starts on his screen-tour. All admission prices for evening are 10 cents with the coupon on the first page of the Telegraph, or 25 cents for a seat in the reserved section admission included.
