DAMROSCH GIVES PLEASING CONCERT

Elman Plays Faultlessly, Delighting Big Audience of Music Lovers

A fine soloist, an eminent conductor, a first-class orchestra, a beautiful program, and a great audience, all working together for good, made last night's concert at the Chestnut Street A fine soloist, an eminent conduc night's concert at the Chestnut Street Auditorium an event of pure joy and nspiration. The audience was good to look upon. It was eager, appreciaive and enthusiastic, and listened well to the offerings of Mr. Damrosch and his men.

Mr. Damrosch long ago "proved himself" as an orchestra conductor and musician of high rank. In spite of the fact that our leading American of the fact that our leading American or the fact that our leading American orchestras have imported conductors, Mr. Damrosch alone has held his own, and stands to-day not only the ablest of our American orchestral conductors but equal to the best of our imported brethren.

The program opened auspiciously and appropriately with Beethoven's reat C minor Symphony (No. 5) great C minor Symphony (No. 5).

great C minor Symphony (No. 5).

Who shall analyze the master's mind, heart or soul in this immortal musical outpouring?

There is no motto, no suggestion, no story bequeathed to us for guidance. Repeated hearings, even, would only allow us to approximate the workings of a mind no man has yet entirely grasped. Beethoven is not for the skeptical or shallow. His music still stands supreme—vigorous, lofty and mighty.

The C minor Symphony was the first in which Beethoven expressed himself freely and absolutely. He threw away all traces of formalism; ignored, yea, defled the critics and gave vent-forcibly and truthfully to his musical feelings.

Mischa Elman---

The Russian wizard of the violin, last night charmed hundreds of music lovers with his playing.

What delight might be afforded if we could hear him any time we wished. What pleasure, what inspiration might be ours.

In Mischa Elman's own statement, he gives the answer.

"I consider THE VICTROLA the perfect talking machine and when it comes to reproducing music records the Victrola is unequalled. It is a well-known fact that recording violin records is exceedingly difficult but my Victrola records are so good that they never cease to be both a joy and won-der to myself. I wish to offer my sincere congratulations to all the genial gentlemen of Harrisburg and vicinity who belong to the elect circle known as Victrola Representatives.
