INSPECTION TRIP

Commissioners Will Look Over Section of Real Estate Next Week

PUSHING NEW BUILDINGS

Approach of Cold Weather Makes Contractors Hustle; Spring Prospects

posed inspection tour is the big event of the week in realty and building circles.

The appeals from all the wards were filed and heard during the last ten days. After the trip over town next week the councilmen will sit as a board of tax revision to make such week the councilmen will sit as a board of tax revision to make such changes as they deem necessary.

That the valuation of $51,842,599 as fixed by the assessors is entirely too low, if the tax rate for the ensuing year is to be kept within 9 mills, is generally conceded, as the increase would only total $1,606,533. The assessment during the previous year was $50,336,754. Another million or two will have to be added, it is figured.

Different Assessment Scheme.

Council generally wants to keep down the mill rate, although it is probable that a different method of assessment may be a matter for early discussion among the new commissioners. Most of them prefer a way whereby a higher percentage of actual value shall be used as a basis for assessment. Mayor-elect Ezra S. Meals, for instance, thinks 80 instead of 60 percent, would be the better basis upon which to levy the assessments.

The approach of cold weather has given zest to the building operations for 1915's schedule in that the contractors are hurrying to finish what structures they have under way before snow flies or Jack Frost tightens his grip on Mother Earth. Not that the chilly, snow-suggesting winds from the North exactly frightened prospective builders; some unusually big permits were issued during the week.

Big Factory Addition

One of the biggest permits, perhaps, was granted to the Blough Manufacturing Company. It will build a four-story brick addition to its plant on Fulton street near Reily at a cost of $10,000. Other important operations of the week included six three-story brick and mansard roof dwelings on Sixth street 100 feet west of Roel's lane. Permission for the executor of on Fulton street near Reily at a cost of $10,000. Other important operations of the week included six three-story, brick and mansard roof dwellings on Sixth street 100 feet west of Reel's lane. Permission for the erection of the row was given to Hantzman & Morrett. These contractors, by the way, have planned a new feature in city building schemes by Including a single-story brick garage in the rear of and as part of each dwelling. The cost will be $13,800.

Work is being pushed as rapidly as possible on the operations that were begun late this Fall. This includes the residences J. E. Gipple had started and those with which the MacWilliams Construction Company and the W. H. Shue Company are busy. Among the big single residence jobs that are keeping carpenters and contractors on the jump are the new J. Allen Donaldson house at Front and Peffer streets, which will be one of the finest homes along that broad drive, and the home of P. G. Farquharson.

Spring Prospects

That the opening of the Spring of 1916 will be marked by a big boost in realty circles is already indicated by the contemplated operations of many builders. For instance, William McIlhenny, who has erected any number of cosy little homes on Allison Hill, is plannig to put up a half-dozen three-story dwellings on the north side of Regina street just west of Seventeenth. Clinton M. Hershey, county engineer, expects to add another dozen nice homes in the Bellevue section. His plans include the erection of twelve houses on Bellevue road between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets.

The paving operations and it is expected that the Spring program for 1916 will include some extensive structures there.
