PRISONERS SET FIRE TO LOCKUP

Men Arrested at New Cumberland Attempt to Escape From Custody of Constable

Special to The Telegraph
New Cumberland, Pa., Nov. 24.—Two young men were arrested for vagrancy and intoxication yesterday and placed in the borough lockup by Constable Howard Stone. Last evening when the officer visited the lockup to look after the prisoners he found the place full of smoke and the young men apparently fast asleep. They had set fire to the mattress on the bed and it was blazing up rapidly. The officer extinguished the fire with several buckets of water.

Later in the evening he handcuffed the two men together and started to take them to the Carlisle jail on the trolley car. When Fifth street was reached one of the prisoners broke loose and jumped from the rapidly moving car, following immediately by Constable Stone. The chase led down Fifth street for about a square, when the man was recaptured and taken back to the lockup. The other prisoner in the meantime had been pardoned by the conductor. The constable then took both men to the county prison and charges will likely be preferred against them for firing the building.

The Forward Movement
Fresh impetus to the forward movement is imparted by lower temperatures in many sections, which stimulates the demand for all classes of seasonal merchandise, notably clothing, footwear and fuel. As retail distribution quickens and broadens, wholesale departments in turn benefit and reports from all parts of the country are remarkably uniform in disclosing progressive improvement. Not only does business continue highly favorable in many sections, but there is every promise, especially in industrial lines, of a degree of expansion limited only by facilities.—Dun's Review.

A FEW MINUTES WITH THE LATEST BOOKS & MAGAZINES

Michael O'Halloran, by Gene Stratton-Porter
Mickey was a newsboy and he lived all alone in a tenement in Sunrise alley until he acquired a family, upon which event hangs the tale of "Michael O'Halloran," by Gene Stratton-Porter's new novel published by Doubleday, Page & Co. The book is comparatively new, but is also old, if a universal interest in its pages is any criterion of age.

Mickey had a formula, left him as a heritage by his mother, who died in his early youth, leaving him alone in the world. The formula was like a clock, as follows: Clean up your face, brush your clothes. Eat what was left from supper for breakfast. Put your bed to air and go out with your papers. Don't be afraid to offer them to the neighbors. Wash your strength for; but be deathly afraid to beg, to lie, or to steal, and if you starve, freeze or die, never, never touch any kind of drink. That was Mickey's heritage.

"To read this book," says the Garden City publishers, "makes one feel a warm glow of satisfaction." You perceive must agree that the publishers are correct if you have read "Freckles," "The Girl of the Limberlost," "The Harvester," and "Laddie," for the same spirit permeates all of Mrs. Porter's books and their good, wholesome nature is their best recommendation.

Mickey is a lovable character and as honest and frank as the day is long. Mrs. Porter's books are, therefore, they are right or wrong. And again, "Ain't it funny how many nice folks there are in the world? Most every

MRS. GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Author of "Michael O'Halloran."

One I know is too nice for any use." And his philosophy of life, which would certainly entitle him to life membership in the optimists' club, can be summed up in the words, "Before you can make anybody laugh, you must first laugh at yourself. I live on a laugh; and the two little words significant with meaning, 'Be square.'"

Keeping in Condition, by Harry H. Moore.
A handbook of training is always valuable as a guide to young men and older boys who are anxious to keep themselves in the best physical shape. There is a peculiar fascination about being able to feel a little stronger and healthier than life other fellow, but only by faithful training and intelligent themselves, with the result that George Ade was among those who received the greatest number of votes, and Harry Leon Wilson, Booth Tarkington and Mark Twain among those voted second.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE—DRINK TEA!

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or, as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—Adv.
