If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Evenly That It Cannot Be Discovered

A large two-horse delivery wagon of Bates and Company, 110 Market street, skidded this morning on the hill, near Cameron and Market streets, and crashed into the Mt. Pleasant Hotel building. The tongue of the wagon tore a hole in the building. The heavy jar against the building broke a number of windows.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach. can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and setting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, billious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.—Advertisement.

THE GROWTH OF THE MOVIES

It is only ten years since the movie was competing with nothing but the "nickelodeon." It had no theaters. It was housed in converted shops, unlighted and unventilated, patronized only by the poor of the tenements who were inured to the odorous darkness of windowless bedrooms and so starved for entertainment that a magic-lantern show was drama enough for them. The theatrical magnates regarded the movies as lightly as the dreadnaughts regarded the first submarine. When the nickelodeons and dime musees had all been wrecked by it, the vaudeville managers began to suffer, but the potenties of Broadway were still unworried. Their galleries disappeared, but they were sure that the thing was a passing fad. They were sure that the dwindling of their "road business" was due to the dance craze or hard times. When the suburbanites, who had to pour into Broadway on theater trains, began to go to the movies in their home towns, the managers regarded it as merely temporary. When the stock companies in the "provinces" began to lose, it was accepted as a relief from the hurtful competition with the road business. And then the road business. And then the road business. And then the road business itself slowly pinched out to nothing. With the fading of that road-profit, the bankruptcies began. Broadway became a movie thoroughfare, and the spoken drama went into the side streets to build itself "Little" theaters and "Bandbox" theaters and "Punch and Judy" theaters, not much larger than the converted shops from which the movies had emerged.

The positions of these two rivals in New York has now been almost completely reversed. The movies are playing to "two-dollar" andiences; the "legitimate" theaters are carrying on secret cut-rate campaigns that have reduced their prices by half. The high-salaried stars are going before the camera to earn Mary Pickford in-THE GROWTH OF THE MOVIES It is only ten years since the

Why We Quarreled

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water (Copyright, 1915, by Star Company.)
My husband and I quarrel because he cannot see that what is sauce for the gander.
In other words, he is absolutely inconsistent with regard to the matter of confidences. He expects me to tell him all that I do, yet there are times when he snubs me for doing this.
For example, when we were first married he said that, as my husband, he had a right to know of all my worries and troubles. But there have been many occasions when I could see that he was bored when I talked to him of these.

I remember one night when he came some days, when 1 mentioned cascurally that Reginald had been in the city.

"Oh, has he?" Richard asked. "How do you know?" Did you hear from lim?"

"Yes," I rejoined. "He called me up one day."

"But you didn't see him, eh? He didn't come up here?"

"He didn't come up here?"

"Where?"

"At Sherry's. I lunched with him there."

"When was that?"

"When a fortnight ago." I replied.

these.

I remember one night when he came home from the office and asked me, as he always does, how things had gone during the day. I was tired and worried, for everything had gone worsel, for everything had gone worsel, i said as much.

"Bridget has been as cross as two sticks," I complained. "I have had a headache; the dress that I had cleansed came home from the cleaners just about ruined, and the pudding I made for dinner is a failure."

I know my husband hates to see a woman cry, so I did not allow my voice even to quaver. Yet he frowned.

"What a nice list of grievances to fire at a man as soon as he gets in after a hard day at the office!" he remarked, sarcastically. "It makes one teel just about as cheerful as a rainy day in the country."

"Well, I declare!" I exclaimed, "haven't you told me often that you expected me to confide everything to you?"

"Everything that's worth confid-expected me to confidence everything expected me to confidence you?"

"Everything that's worth confiding," he returned. "But surely Bridget's ill humors and the cleaner's delinquencies are not of such moment that you need inflict them upon me before you've even asked me how I feel. I have troubles of my own, please remember."

city.

"Oh, has he?" Richard asked. "How do you know?" Did you hear from him?"
"Yes," I rejoined. "He called me up one day."
"But you didn't see him, eh? He didn't come up here?"
"He didn't come up here, but I saw him all the same."
"Where?"
"At Sherry's. I lunched with him there."
"About a fortnight ago," I replied. My husband flushed angrily. "A fortnight ago "he exclaimed. "Why didn't you tell me about it?"
I recalled to his memory the fact that he had been annoyed by my telling him some of my experiences. Of course he was displeased and said that I was inconsistent and had willuly misconstrued his meaning. I let him talk on until he added:

"Moreover, you deceived me. I have a right to know when you lunch with other men—even with a cousin. Married people should not keep such things from each other. It is not proper."

"His Words Cut Me"

His words cut me cruelly. Am I not trying to run his home to please him, and is it not in the discharge of my dities along these lines that most of my duties along these lines that most of my drilas come? If things went wrong at his office, would I not be glad to have him tell me of them?" I said as much to him.

"But I wouldn't tell you of them," is dedeclared. "That's just it. Do I ever regale you with an account of my office boy's latest stupidity, or my stenographer's most recent negligence? No, indeed! When I come home I leave all that kind of thing behind me."

"Because you can," I rejoined. "But a woman cannot leave her trials behind her. They are right there before her eyes day and night. I do think you meen might understand that."

I ate. I got to thinking over what he had said, and the more I thought the more indignant I got. I made up my mind to talk less of my affairs, since he showed so plainly that he was bored by them.

When, a week later, a cousin of mine—a nice fellow who had been my chum when I was a girl—came to it town and telephoned me to lunch with him at Sherry's, I went and said nothing about it to my husband for Look, Mother! See if tongue is coated, breath hot or stomach sour.

'California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach liver, bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "Calitorna Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowers without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give at teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colicaremember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.
