Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well, what a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath. Everyone who is accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead of feeling as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter. Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash the lining of the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before the first morsel of food into the stomach. The addition of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, the acids, and acidities, and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and limestone phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and acidifying ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs. The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have hollow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but it is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.—Advertisement.

WOMEN AND THEIR INTERESTS

"Their Married Life"

Helen woke up suddenly and then sat up and looked around. She wondered what time it was. Evidently Warren had not come in, which was strange, as the lodge seldom kept him very late. She switched on the lights and the little clock on her dressing table said twelve thirty. She had been asleep two hours. What could have happened to Warren? And then she smiled at her foolish fears. Warren would be in any minute now and would laugh and tell her he didn't need a nurse. Well she would wait up for a time, she stily could not sleep. Selecting a book she settled herself in one of the chairs in the parlor, but it got too cold and she went back to bed and turned on the light by her bed. She felt suddenly very wide awake and almost at the same time had a premonition that all was not right with Warren. The clock slowly ticked away. One o'clock, half past one, two. Helen jumped from the bed finally, she simply could not bear the suspense any longer. Going to the telephone she rang up and gave Bob's number. Bob would know if Warren had left the lodge and if Bob hadn't returned yet, she would not worry any longer. "They don't answer," said central in a sleep-y voice. "Try them again, please," said Helen, "someone must be there." "After a moment the line buzzed and Bob's voice offered a sleepy cross "Hello." "Hello, Bob, this is Helen." "Helen? Why that's wrong? Any one sick?" "No, but Warren isn't home. Did he leave the lodge with you?" "There was a moment's silence. "After a moment Helen said frantically, "afraid that Bob had run off." "Hello," said Bob reassuringly. "I'm still here. Helen, why Warren didn't come to the lodge to-night." "Bob assures Helen He'll Come Right Over." "There was a silence and Helen turned white. Her first thought was of danger to Warren, her second was anger that he had deceived her. "Where can he be?" she whispered hoarsely. "Now, don't worry Helen," said Bob reassuringly. "I'm going to dress and come right over." Helen protested weakly, but the thought of seeing and talking to Bob was too much of a temptation and she hung up a moment later secure in the knowledge that Bob would do something to help her. A thousand things kept flying through her head. Suppose Warren had been hurt. Suppose even now he happened to be lying in some terrible place robbed and injured. The thought of hearing that her frantic and to her hair up on her head in a more tidy manner and threw a blue silk dressing gown around her. Then she put coffee into the percolator and waited to have something hot for Bob when he came. She closed the door carefully after taking a peep into the parlor, and closed the door leading into the kitchen so that Mary would not wake up. Helen had a dread of the gossip of servants, not that she had anything to conceal, but there was no telling what had happened. She carried cream in from the kitchen and held a peep at the door at that moment that almost made her drop the little pitcher. A moment later she added to Bob and wonder of all wonders, Louise.

"But you shouldn't have done this," Helen protested. "Why, it was simply fine of Bob to offer to come over, but not you, Louise? It's too much." "Nonsense! you needed me." And Louise, seeing the percolator on the table, filled the electric lamp and lighted the flame. In a few seconds the bubbling amber liquid was humming cheerfully, and Helen glanced again at the clock she saw it was a quarter to three. "Warren told me that he was going to the lodge; that's absolutely all I know," she said pitiously. "And I don't know anything more myself, excepting that I was surprised he wasn't there. We had only a short meeting. I was home at ten-thirty." "Don't you want to ask him on the davenport, dear?" coaxed Louise. "Then you could be resting. Bob and I are going to stay with you." "I couldn't rest," moaned Helen. "Where can Warren be?" "Don't worry Helen dear, he may be perfectly all right." "But something must be wrong, you know that something must be wrong." "I wish I knew somewhere to telephone," said Bob, "but I feel so helpless. I haven't an idea in the world where we could find out anything about Warren." "The clock struck in silvery chimes from the little French clock on the mantel. Helen put down her coffee cup and at that moment the telephone rang. "Louise Tries to Comfort Helen" Bob sprang to answer it, and a moment later was back with the news, while the two women stood by and waited. "Mr. Curtis? No, but this is her brother, what is it? Yes, this is where Mr. Warren Curtis lives, what about him? Accidents? You don't say." "Oh," moaned Helen. "Oh, Louise, I told you so. What shall we do?" "Wait and see," said Louise soothingly. "We must hear what Warren is saying." Bob asked a few crisp questions and answered those down here asked in clean cut monosyllables. Helen and Louise could get very little from what he was saying. And when he finally rang off they both gathered about him anxiously. "Tell us as quickly as possible dear," said Louise. Helen is terribly upset. Bob looked at Helen's white face and burning eyes sympathizingly. "Now don't be too frightened Helen," he protested, "but Warren has had an accident with the car." "The car" burst out both women simultaneously. "Yes, I don't know much about it. The accident occurred on the Westchester road, and Warren is detained at one of the precinct stations down town. He is in a bad way, and that's all he told me," said Bob. "I'm going right down now, and you and Louise had better try to get some rest before we need you." Bob hurried away in a few moments and Helen turned to Louise, tears streaming down her cheeks. "He must have had someone with him," she anguishingly. Louise put her arm around Helen's trembling figure and led her into the bedroom. "Nonsense, dear," she remonstrated. "He doesn't mean anything and try to get some sleep. I am going to be right here beside you. Everything is sure to be all right, and Bob will do everything necessary. You must be patient and wait."

Investigating Confession of Liquid Fire Inventor That He Knew of Plots

Cleveland, O., Dec. 1.—Federal and county officers to-day were investigating a "confession" which they say was made to them in the office of Prosecuting Attorney Cyrus Locher late yesterday by Dr. E. W. Ritter, in which Ritter is claimed to have told of having knowledge of plots against munitions plants in the United States. Ritter was arrested on a charge of passing a worthless check for $50, on Miss Clara Darby. He is being held in $5,000 bail until the story, federal officials say he told, can be probed. Among the items in Ritter's alleged confession was the claim that his real name is Emerich W. Ritter Von Rotztaghe, son of a former Austrian count and a former officer in both the Austrian and German navies. Ritter, however, Ritter denied to newspapermen that he is the son of a count. Ritter claims he is the inventor of "liquid fire." Officials say that he has been experimenting extensively with it in the local gas fields.

WHY DO WE DO THIS?

Never in the history of Pennsylvania has such a distinctive, dignified and high grade publicity contest been offered, especially emanating from one of the largest exclusive music houses in the East. The fact that this far-reaching publicity contest is launched by this old established concern stamps it immediately as one of the squarest propositions ever offered, and its magnitude precludes any possibility of legitimate criticism. It is a well-known fact that high-grade advertising is the life of up-to-date business methods in any line of commercialism. We want the good people of this vicinity to better know the WINTER PIANO CO., their fine pianos and their many saving facilities to the buyer. We want to increase our sales this year, and for this purpose we have set aside a large fund for advertising purposes, to bring this house to the attention of every home, old and new. Absolutely without one cent of cost or expense, One $600 Rudolf 88-note Player Piano and One $450 Winter Upright Piano, will be given to someone for just a little work. You have an equal chance and with a little pleasant diversion, may be the winner. Read slogan directions carefully on right side of number puzzle.

A Handsome Piece of Silver Will Be Given Free to Each and Every Person Sending the Correct Solution of the "33" Puzzle.

DIRECTIONS—Take the numbers from 7 to 15 inclusive, and arrange them so that when added to eleven (11) in the center, the sum will be 33—the same horizontally, diagonally, and perpendicularly. Use each number only once. You may use this paper or other material. Contest open to everybody—men, women, boys, girls. All contestants residing outside of Harrisburg will have the same chance as those living in the city. Every one contesting for these prizes may also enter the competition for the other large prizes. Namely—The Player Piano and The Upright Piano, mentioned above.

DIRECTIONS—In advertising and in business literature, short catchy phrases and sentences are very valuable. We need them and will gladly pay for them. Most of the slogans that have brought fortunes to business houses were originated by some one not connected with the house. These are samples, "Always reliable," "The one you will eventually buy," "Eventually, why not now," "Mr. Make It Right," "The Big, Friendly Store," "Get it at Evans'" and many more. You can think of dozens as good or better. It is worth trying for. Give us your best thought. A Beautiful $600 Rudolf Player Piano and a $450 Upright Winter Piano are surely going to be given to someone who least expects it. Coupon is only for convenience. Use it or any other piece of material. A representative from each of the Harrisburg Newspapers will act as judges and the prizes will be awarded by them absolutely. The best slogan secures the Player Piano, the next best the Upright Piano. Each contestant will be notified by mail.

All prizes must be called for not later than ten days after the closing of the contest. All prizes in this great publicity contest will be given absolutely free. Remember this costs you nothing. To the next ten who do not participate in the distribution of the above piano prizes we will give a bonafide A. P. M. A. Check, for $125, which will be accepted absolutely the same as cash as part payment on any new piano in our wareroom. The next 25 an A. P. M. A. Check for $100. The next 50 an A. P. M. A. Check for $75. The next 75 an A. P. M. A. Check for $50. The next 100 an A. P. M. A. Check for $25. The next 200 an A. P. M. A. Check for $10. All piano manufacturers and dealers have different ways of advertising. Some employ great artists, some use expensive magazine advertising, while others use teachers to persuade people to buy, paying them commissions. We, however, believe that the best advertising is a satisfied customer. REMEMBER! This Contest Positively Closes Saturday, December 4, 1915, at 10.30 P. M. RUSH YOUR ANSWERS!
