

The Fee and The Bond

¶ You've had the principal provisions of the jitney ordinance now before council, explained to you. You've had an opportunity to weigh them all pretty carefully.

¶ What's your opinion? Pretty fair measure, don't you think?

¶ Take, for instance, the two most important provisions—the fee and the bond.

¶ A license fee of $50.00 isn't drastic, is it?

¶ That has to cover mercantile tax, license tax, gross revenue tax and must also help to take care of YOUR streets which are now being subjected to double strain by the jitney.

¶ Based upon receipts of $10 per day, that's a tax of less than one and one-half per cent. of the jitney's receipts. This company pays three per cent. of ITS receipts—and in addition pays for a substantial share of the paving, renewing same when worn out.

¶ So much for the fee.

¶ Now let's pass on to the bond—more important to YOU than all the rest.

¶ Just this week you've had forcibly brought home to you a condition that should make you pause and think a bit—when the State Highway Department found it necessary to take away the license of a local jitney owner, whose car while being operated by an unlicensed driver, struck a man and sent him to the hospital for several weeks.

¶ Doesn't that show you what is even MORE LIKELY to happen any day—perhaps to YOU—on jitney crowded thoroughfares?

¶ For despite regulations—irresponsible drivers WILL take a chance. More than four hundred jitney licenses have been granted to date. It's impossible to watch every one of these cars every minute of the day and night. It only takes one irresponsible driver one minute to commit one violation that may result in a lifetime of sorrow.

¶ Do you realize how really serious this matter is to YOU?

¶ Do you know that it is claimed that many insurance companies will not bond the average jitney owner for $5,000?

¶ Doesn't that make all the more necessary the provision of protection for you?

¶ If insurance companies are unwilling to stake their MONEY on the risk, are you willing that the LIFE of YOU, YOUR WIFE, or YOUR CHILD, shall be put at stake?

¶ Think that over.

¶ A $5,000 bond seems ONLY FAIR to YOU, doesn't it? That's a pretty small amount in case three or four others are injured at the same time as you, and ALL seek to recover damages.

¶ These are the two provisions that most concern YOU—the two to which the jitney interests will no doubt offer the greatest objection.

¶ Can you see anything unreasonable about them?

¶ The matter is in your hands—it's squarely up to you to see that, financially and physically, YOU are protected.

Poultry Industry Benefited by Frequent Exhibitions

PEKIN DUCKS

COPYRIGHT, 1915.

Although Pekin ducks originated in China, all the credit for improving the size, shape and color is due American breeders.

The Pekin is used extensively for market. The young ducks are rapid growers and are marketable from the "green" duck age until full grown. At the age of ten weeks they weigh five or six pounds and bring the raisers as much profit as could be secured by feeding until full grown.

When full grown, the drakes weigh eight pounds and the ducks seven pounds, while many specimens have been raised that exceeded these weights.

Pekins are pure white in plumage, with orange yellow bills and legs. Their bodies are long and deep. The small curled feathers just over the main tail feathers distinguish the drake from the duck. Pekin ducks are prolific layers of fertile eggs.

Shows Instill Enthusiasm and Create Interest Among Amateurs; Bring Fanciers and Farmers Together

By Michael K. Boyer
Poultry Editor of the Farm Journal.

Poultry shows are largely responsible for the rapid progress of the Poultry Industry in America. Exhibition fowls at their best are interest stimulators and are often the cause of poultrymen adopting better methods. In this article, Mr. Boyer advises the amateur to take an interest in poultry shows and also tells how to breed prize winners.

SIXTY-ONE years ago the first poultry show was held in America. The exhibition was given in the American Museum, in New York City, owned and operated by P. T. Barnum, the great showman.

It was at that show that twenty-nine judges were employed, among whom were such noted men as the late D. D. T. Moore, editor of Moore's Rural New Yorker, and the late Luther Tucker, editor of the Country Gentleman. An association was formed under the title of the National Poultry Society and the late P. T. Barnum was elected president. Among the list of vice-presidents were Horace Greeley, Orange Judd and George P. Burnham. A. B. Allen, the noted agricultural editor, was chosen recording secretary.

History does not say how long this national organization existed, but it is presumed that it held up until about 1873, when, at a meeting in Buffalo, N. Y., the American Poultry Association was organized. The object of the latter society was to get up a standard of excellence for the guidance of judges in awarding prizes.

The first American Standard of Excellence, now known as the American Standard of Perfection, was adopted by the American Poultry Association at the meeting held January 15, 1874.

As stated, the first regular poultry show was held sixty-one years ago (1854). Prior to that the only public displays of fowls were held at county fairs. These were mostly in open cages, out of doors, somewhere about the fair grounds, and received only a passing notice. The judges chosen were men who were anything but experts, but by common consent their judgment was final and was gracefully accepted by the exhibitors.

So much for history. At the present day shows are held all over the United States—in small towns and in cities—and so largely are they held that, no matter where poultrymen reside, they have an opportunity to attend at least one of these exhibitions.

The fancier deserves a whole lot of credit. He is the bone and sinew of the business. He has made for us new breeds, and he has improved the old ones. There are two classes of poultrymen—the fanciers and the utility men. The former's occupation is to perfect the old and create new breeds. They keep the breeds in their purity.

It is up to the utility man to improve the practical qualities. In other words, the fancier gives us the breed as it should be in size, in style, in symmetry.

The practical man then must, by selection and breeding, bring out the egg and meat qualities. The meat qualities are largely created by the fancier, since he must put shape and size to the birds.

Now while the fancier and the poultry farmer are working along two distinct lines, it is important that they "get together." The former, in making or improving breeds, should keep in mind the requirements of the latter. The latter, in turn, should make his improvement without sacrificing the characteristics of the breed in hand.

Big Profits in Milk-Fed Poultry

The milk-feeding of chickens in crates has become a big industry in itself. Milk-fed broilers and roasters find favor in all markets and bring higher prices. Next week, Professor Frank C. Hays will describe the best method of milk-feeding and will tell how to prepare birds for the market.

Bulgarian Divisions Cross Hungary on Way to the Western Front

By Associated Press
London, Dec. 4, 12.02 P. M.—The much rumored Russian diversion against the Bulgarians has not materialized, but the fact that no Russian official statement was issued last night gave rise to hopes in London that it was being withheld in order to chronicle this new phase of the Balkan campaign.

Dispatches from several sources assert that both the northern and southern Serbian armies are safely established in Albania, while forces of the Serbs who evidently formed part of the defenders of Monastir have reached the French camp at Givogell, in Serbian territory near the Greek frontier, not far from Salonika.

A feeling of optimism over the near eastern situation seems to be growing here, but outwardly there is little to justify it except on the theory that the Russian onslaught against Bulgaria will quickly crystallize, while entente diplomatic negotiations in Greece again seem to be progressing favorably.

At Home Christmas Eve

COULD anything be more in harmony with a true Christmas spirit than to have the family circle complete on Christmas Eve, when the joy of anticipation is greatest?

¶ Certain of the endorsement which a generous-minded public will again give, just as it has in the past two holiday seasons, we announce the renewal of our policy of

Closing at 6 P. M. on December 24th —allowing our several hundred associates to participate in the joys of home-gatherings on this greatest of all evenings—Christmas Eve, and to provide a period of relaxation, that to them Christmas Day may bring the fullest enjoyment.

¶ Every day brings more and more men and women on errands of gift buying, to receive NOW the best that stores can offer. All day yesterday the store was a busy, early shopping spectacle, but spacious aisles, elevators and stairways; the concise arrangement of departments; and our convenient shopping transfer system avoided crowding and delay.

¶ The whole Bowman organization is charged with the spirit of Christmas and with Christmas helpfulness.

¶ A store of vast Christmas stocks—of efficient service—of cheerfulness.

JEWELER HOST TO MANY EMPLOYEES

P. G. Diener Gives First Annual Dinner; Happy Event at Colonial Club

P. G. DIENER

Local Jeweler Host Last Night at Dinner to Employees

Good fellowship, sound business talks, music, dancing and other entertainment were features last night at the first annual dinner given to his employees by P. G. Diener, jeweler, 408 Market street. The happy event took place at the Colonial Club. There were 35 present, Mr. Diener proved a jolly host.

Following the dinner, the Rev. S. Winfield Herman, one of the guests, made an address, showing the value of friendship in business. He complimented the host of the evening on his unique method in getting acquainted with his employees. Percy I. Beltz, who has been with the Diener store for many years, referred to the excellent service by the clerical forces and employees and gave a number of suggestions as to the best means for taking care of the Christmas trade. Cooperation between the employe and employer was the subject of a short talk by Wellington G. Jones.

Mr. Diener told his employees of his early start in business, and gave an outline of plans for the future. He thanked them for their good work and to the new clerks gave timely suggestions.

After the dinner there were dancing, piano and victrola music and card games. Well-timed to the feast the guests bowled a series of contests, the fair sex outplaying their male opponents.

The policy which has made the Diener jewelry store one of the leading business places in Central Pennsylvania received much favorable comment last night. P. G. Diener started business in Harrisburg March 1, 1898, at 408 Market street. The store room was 15 by 28 feet in size. One person was employed to help Mr. Diener at that time. The rapid growth of business necessitated the enlargement of the Diener store, and the new place of business was opened on April 27, 1907.

The present establishment is 24 by 125 feet on the first floor. The second floor is used as a repair department. Mr. Diener announced that further improvements in his store were contemplated. A lease has been signed for 20 years, expiring in 1937, showing the faith of Mr. Diener in Harrisburg's future. The present number of employees is 35. The regular force includes seven clerks and five repairmen. Mr. Diener attributes his success to the one-price policy, high quality of goods, and the close attention given every customer. He said: "A child can buy at the Diener store with the same assurance of satisfaction as a grown person. Every article sold is guaranteed." The Diener store is a part of the Hainmark stores, known all over the United States, and which includes 20,000 retail jewelers. The guests present last night were:
