SUFFRAGISTS WIN OUT OVER RIVALS

Will Get First Hearing Before Congress on Susan B. Anthony Amendment

Washington, D. C., Dec. 7. — The ongressional committee of the National American Woman Suffrage Association won out over its rivals, the Congressional Union, in the race for the first hearing in the sixty-fourth congress on the Susan B. Anthony suffrage amendment.

Rival deputations from the two or ganizations called on Senator Charles S. Thomas, chairman of the Senate ommittee on woman suffrage, to-day and asked for a hearing. The Senator replied that he had conferred with his colleagues regarding the situation and they had decided to grant the Na-tional American Woman Suffrage Association a special hearing on the Susan B. Anthony resolution for Wednesday. December 15, at 10 oclock This is during the week of the

a. m. This is during the week of the forty-seventh annual convention of the National Association, in Washington. The Congressional Union deputation asked for a hearing during its own convention, which will be held the week preceding that of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. Senator Thomas toyed with a paper weight and replied blandly that it was impossible. Then the Union asked to share the hearing granted to the national association. Senator Thomas replied that this, too, was impossible.

Against Hearing

Thomas replied that this, too, was impossible.

Against Hearing

"Can we not then have a hearing somewhat later?" desperately demanded Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the Congressional Union.

"We always like to accommodate parties who are interested in measures before the Senate," said the Senator, "when we are satisfied that they have any real light to throw upon the question. Some of us, however, would have to be convinced that you have anything new or to the point to add to the discussion. Personally I do not believe that a hearing be given you. The committee is made up for the most part of suffragists, but those of us who are members of the Democratic party are not especially interested in listening to a repetition of your threats against that party if we do not succeed in forcing the suffrage resolution through the sixty-fourth congress."

prior to and on the night of the murder.

It is said that Mrs. Albright made frequent visits to the Harrisburg home of Carrie Black and sold her lace and other goods. Smith met the aged woman there a number of times and was of the opinion that she had money. One witness will tell of a remark made by Smith prior to the murder, during which he said: "That old —— has money. It might be worth going after some time." By Associated Press
Washington, D. C., Dec. 7. — With the meeting of the Democratic National Committee to-day the contesting delegations from St. Louis, Dallas and Chicago continued vigorously to urge the claims of their respective cities for the honor of entertaining the Democratic national convention of 1916.

Dr. Poos said: "It was comparatively easy to compile a schedule for the stores, as there are dull periods in every day and some of the boys and girls can be spared and each child will go to the schools two days of four hours each. The workers have been placed in three grades according to their previous schooling, and will be sent to a nearby school building. Lessons will be given in industrial geography, industrial arithmetic, English, hygiene, drawing and salesmanship."

J. BARLEYCORN

It was John Barleycorn who finally put John L, out of the ring.

After making and losing fortunes as a prizelighter and vaudeville performer, John L, opened a saloon. He was his own best customer. In a few years he had wasted all his substance and was down and out. He literally that the bottom. The remnants of his household furniture were levied on to a satisfy a debt, and when the officers went to get the furniture they found the former world's champion lying on his bed in a drunken stuper.

the former world's champion lying on his bed in a drunken stuper.

They laid him on the floor and took his bed away. One of them, in a spirit, of sympathy, left a bottle of whisky beside the drunken man.

When John woke up he found his room stripped of furniture, his body a wreck and his credit utterly gone. He looked at the bottle of whisky, picked it up and smashed it against the wall he began a long fight to master his appetite. He won, finally, and going with his wife, out to a farm near Boston, regained his health, got the liquor out of his system and became a prosperous farmer. He says if he had not quit at that time there would have been an incompletous headstone in some burying fround in Boston marked: "Sacred to the memory of John L. Sullivan," and that would have been all.
