SINGLE COMB BROWN LEGHORNS

COPYRIGHT, 1915

Like others in the Leghorn tribe, the Single Comb Brown Leghorn is a heavy egg producer and a nonsitter. Breeders must depend upon hens of other breeds or use artificial means to hatch and brood the chicks. Because of the rich red and green-black colors of the male and the soft brown plumage of the female, this breed is much admired. It is popular with the fancier as well as with the farmer.

Several of our popular American breeders owe their quality of heavy egg production to the Brown Leghorn, which has been used extensively as foundation stock.

Brown Leghorn eggs are white and larger than those laid by other varie-lies of Leghorn, and find ready sale in certain markets. The chicks grow rapidly and reach maturity early. Full-grown Brown Leghorns are usually larger than any other Leg-horns. The hens weigh from 4½ to 5½ pounds, while the males weigh as high as 5½ to 6 pounds. Keep Litter bry and Clean

The litter for the horse is an important feature that is not often given proper consideration. It should at all times be perfectly dry, light and easily turned over. If it becomes foul or damp and heavy so it will not work easily when the hens scratch, it must be taken out at once if a good egg yield is desired. This point cannot be emphasized too strongly.

good health, well matured and ready to begin laying in November or December and that they are housed in dry, sanitary quarters, there are cer-tain points of vital importance that receive careful attention. In this article Mr. Hicks discusses in detail the prime essentials to good egg production during cold weather.

WHEN it is decided to start the flock laying, a richer feed should be used than is advisable after they are well started. More beef scrap can be used and gluten meal in larger quantities than in later Meal in larger quantities than in later months. A small amount of green cut bone is useful, provided it can be obtained at a reasonable price, It should not be over four cents a pound ready cut. It will not pay to feed it largely at even three cents, but can be used and peppers, but as a rule these are not advisable because they tend to overstimulate and are believed by many to injure the usefulness of the fowl in later months.

After the hens are laying well, the ration and its proportions are not of so much importance. They must be given careful attention, however, for the first few weeks that the hens are beginning the heavy egg yield. As the feeds that are rich in protein, like beef scrap and green bone, are usually the costly ones, these should be reduced gradually and the cheaper feeds containing less protein substituted. Another reason for this is that as the weather gets colder the laying hens or pullets will need more carbonaceous feeds, such as corn and cornmeal.

SAFE CONDUCTS FOR ATTACHES

Britain and France, through their embassies here, for safe conduct of Captains Boy-Ed and Von Papen, respectively naval and military attaches of the German embassy here, pursuant to the request of Emperor William who personally recalled the officers.

There was some speculation here to-day as to whether Great Britain and France would in event the two German attaches, leave this country, demand that they go under parole, pledging themselves not to participate in the European war. In some quarters it was thought that such a demand might be made. Officials of the German embassy, however, are said to believe it proper to ask for safe conduct for the attaches without qualification, because their successors would remove two fighting officers from Germany.

Officials were plainly gratified today, over the outcome of a situation which had apparently been fraught with serious difficulties. As a result, Secretary Lansing now is free to again take up negotiations with Germany for settlement of the Lusitania controversy and the cases of other foreign diplomatic and consular officers. It is expected that the case of Alexander Von Nuber, Austrian consul general at New York will be the first to be acted on.

the wet mash by mixing with hot water.

With Leghorns the feed may be kept before the flock all the time, but with some flocks of the heavier breeds it will be found they will eat too large a proportion of mash. It is advisable, therefore, to leave the hoppers open only half the day. Mash is very rich and may cause some trouble with looseness of bowels. If it does, cut down the gluten one half for a few days. If this does not stop the trouble, cut the beef scrap one half. This can be fed safely for four or five weeks until the hens are laying well. After this, increase the cornmeal to 200 lbs. and cut the beef scrap and gluten meal one half each, making the change gradually.

Green Feed Necessary

Some form of green feed is very essential for these two months. The best green feed obtainable is sprouted oats, but where they cannot be grown, mangel beet and even common beets or cabbage may be used. Beets are not worth over 50 cents a hundred for feeding while cabbage is hardly worth that. Marysville, Pa., Dec. 11.—Mrs. Margaret Bratton entertained a number of guests at her home in Valley street in honor of her son Harvey's sixteenth birthday Thursday evening. The evening was pleasantly spent in games and music and refreshments were served. The guests were Misses Adella Smith, Anna Hammaker, Frances Fortenbaugh, Pauline Glass, Alda Gault, Mary Deckard, Margaret Clouser, Percy White, Owen Kennedy, Edgar Roberts, James Benfer, Paul Anspach, Harvey and Lewis Bratton, Mrs. Alice Ensminger, Mrs. W. A. Fortenbaugh, Mrs. Margaret Bratton. not worth over 50 cents a hundred for feeding while cabbage is hardly worth that.

Oats may be sprouted in a cellar or even in a room of the resider.ce or other place where a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees may be kept all the time. If colder than this the sprouting is slow, and if allowed to freeze the sprouts are killed. Only the best of oats, unbleached, should be used. They should be wet down in water for twelve hours, using a tub or vat. Then they should be spread out on trays about twenty inches square and three inches deep, making the oats two inches deep for two or three days until they are well sprouted. They should be stirred every day for the first few days and wet thoroughly with cold water. Warm water causes mold, as will a failure to stir the oats well daily. After the sprouts are well grown, about two inches long, the oats should be divided again, making them about one inch and a half thick. They should be wet daily after this, but not stirred. It takes about seven to ten days to grow them well, according to temperature, the grade of oats and the care given them.
