IRISH DRAGOON SAW-CONQUERED
Cast of Giants Refreshingly Combined With Pretty Girls at Orpheum

The much-heralded, genial-souled Andrew Mack came to Harrisburg Saturday afternoon and evening, saw and was seen by a certain number of people, and undoubtedly conquered. The program described what he had to offer as "A Thrilling, Romantic Comedy Drama," which was a pretty big bill to fill, when you look it over. However, it was all of that, and each component part fulfilled itself remarkably fittingly, and well. The gigantic size of the majority of the male portion of the cast rather amazed the audience, and after it had caught its breath and ceased to marvel at the enjoyment of the hearty good-humor of the play completely absorbed their attention.
Andrew Mack, of course, commanded first attention, and deserved it. His conception of Judy McCann, whom he impersonated in order to win a wager from the arch villain of the play, Captain Emmersley, was exceptionally funny and won the hearts of his fellow actors as well as those on the other side of the footlights. He was ably matched off with Miss Gilda Leary, as Lucy Dashwood, a dashing young lady who was naturally the bone of contention between the hero and the villain, and was the pivot about which the plot revolved. The scenes were laid in Ireland and Spain and the play lent itself to the expression of considerable Irish wit. Lieutenant Sparks as a young and romantic Englishman, was very much enjoyed, and his appearances on the stage was the signal for outbursts of appreciative merriment. Miss Josephine Stevens as the Captain's sister had the appealing dark eyes which captivated "Sparks" and lent an additional air of feminine charm which would otherwise have left the situation a little too exclusively masculine.
The inclination toward melodrama which certain portions of the play suggested may be pardoned as necessary to the successful culmination of the plot and since the hero escaped from prison just in time to fight to the death a duel with the villain for the hand of the heroine. Everybody was entirely satisfied.

HUGH HERBERT, THE FAVORITE STAR IS HERE
Easily the most interest is centered in the headline that will be uncovered at the Majestic Theater for the first half of the week than any attraction that has been at the new home of vaudeville. This is because Hugh Herbert is the star of the act and also because it will be the first opportunity Harrisburg has had to see him in his newest playlet called "The Sons of Abraham." Now that Mr. Herbert is announced for his newest offering here, there is little doubt but what vaudeville fans generally will turn out in great numbers. His new act tells the story of an old Jew who thrusts his fortune to his two sons and they play pitch and toss with it until they are in an awful mess. The telephone plays a neat bit in the sketch, the lines are pungent, original and quaint. Mr. Herbert has a beautifully genuine touch of the Hebrew perfect dialect, and his make-up is a picture. A splendid offering comprising the

Interesting Career of America's Greatest Dancer

Contrary to the general belief, Ruth St. Denis, whose fame as an Oriental dancer has encircled the globe, is an American girl and began her work in musical comedy. Her first professional appearance was with "The Passing Show." From musical comedy she passed to the management of David Belasco, remaining under the direction of the wizard of the stage managers for five years. It was while under the tutelage of Mr. Belasco that she first gained her knowledge of stagecraft and lighting effects—a knowledge which has been inevitable to her in the creation of her Oriental dances.
Miss St. Denis first offered her Oriental dances in a New York vaudeville theater. Later she appeared in London, Berlin, Vienna and Paris under her own management, meeting with far greater success than any other dancer artist ever attained. Her success was so great that her foreign engagements were extended from one to four years, after which she returned to America where her own people recognized in her the wonderful artist who had set all Europe talking and worshipping at her shrine. Ruth St. Denis and her company comes to the Orpheum Wednesday night, Dec. 15th.—Advertisement.

"A PAIR OF SILK STOCKINGS"
Daintiness, refinement and smartness is the keynote to the more than ordinary success achieved by Cyril Harcourt's delightful comedy "A Pair of Silk Stockings," which comes to the Orpheum for an engagement of one night next Friday. The attraction comes to this city direct from its long and successful engagements in New York and Boston. Previous to that it proved one of the principal theatrical offerings for a solid year in London.—Adv.

delivered here this evening, Lord Rosebery, the former Prime Minister, said: "At this moment there is coming over a vessel fraught with peace. It is propelled apparently by a gentleman named Ford, who makes, I think, perambulators. He is coming over to pour oil on troubled waters at the inspiration of a Doctor Aker, of whom we know something here, and who, by voice more potent than that of any mortal heard in this world, is going to call the soldiers from the trenches and bid the waves be still. The expedition will fail, but that the 80 passengers receiving free passage may enjoy themselves and do no mischief is our earnest solicitation."
Peace Crusaders Give Cup to Sharpshooters
Detroit, Dec. 12.—An interesting sidelight on how the world-wide activities of Detroit's best known and most active citizen, Henry Ford, are being viewed locally came to light today when the officers of the Detroit branch of the National Security League found on an army shelf a tarnished silver cup which Mr. Ford, peace crusader, presented to the Michigan militia five years ago as a marksmanship trophy. It will soon decorate some downtown window.
At the time of presentation Mr. Ford, according to the officers, told them that "every man should know how to shoot."

understand the spirit of Mr. Ford's invitation.
An appeal to the rulers of Europe was sent out by wireless to-day addressed individually to each reigning monarch, reading:
"Sir: We come in this time of trouble not to add to your burdens, but to help lift them; not to consider which nation is most to blame for the disaster that has befallen Europe, but to end the strife; not to intrude ourselves upon your national life and national ideas, but rather with an earnest desire to understand them and a heartfelt wish to aid in realizing them.
"The love of country for which every day tens of thousands of lives are sacrificed in the same in every land. Your nation is fighting for its national existence and its best national traditions and so there can be no irreconcilable differences. Such common ideals surely must afford a basis upon which to establish a magnanimous and honorable peace.
