S. P. C. A. Notes

A telephone call came to a well-known fruit and produce company the other day that is puzzling them and the Harrisburg S. P. C. A. The message was that unless the company blanketed its horses by afternoon the E. F. C. A. would prosecute them. At once the Society Headquarters was called up for an explanation. None could be given. No one had called from the office, nor had the agent nor any of the members given any such notice. The company finally decided it was a piece of petty spite work, cloaking itself in legitimate guise.

The company—which takes good care of its horses—was appeased but the S. P. C. A. was not. There is not an underhand, anonymous way of doing business. When there is complaint of cruelty to be made it is made openly—nor does a threat come first. The invariable rule of the society is to try every other means of achieving humane treatment of animals before going to law. Any other impression hurts the influence of a society which is an acknowledged power for good

RAIN TRANSFERS SALONIKI CAMP INTO MUDHOLE

Wet Season Makes Things Unpleasant For British Expeditionary Force

PICTURESQUE OLD TOWN

Soldiers of Many Nationalities Rub Elbows in Parked Little Streets

Saloniki, Greece, Dec. 9 (correspondence of the Associated Press).—The camp of the British Mediterranean expeditionary force lies to the west of Saloniki—or Thessaloniki, as the Greeks have it—among the rolling foothills of Mount Korcheou. Although a very considerable force has already left for Doiran, on the Serbo-Bulgarian frontier, there are still some 11,000 men gathered in the camp.

The first lot of British troops landed in Greece were Irish, as the commanding officer, General Sir Bryan Mahan, is Irish. They were what was left of the Irish division sent out to Gallipoli, whence they came on to Saloniki. But, as the general told the Associated Press: "Not," he added, "that they are any less Irish—only there are fewer of them." For a great many were killed, wounded and taken prisoner in Gallipoli, and have been replaced by what material was at hand.

Whatever they are, they are beyond any doubt content to leave Gallipoli. The climate of Saloniki is no longer a boast of this season. It rains every day. The rough, badly paved streets are muddy and full of chuk holes. The roads—such as they are—are knee-deep in mud. Flour is scarce and the food is bad and dear. The price of everything has gone up three times since the arrival of the foreign troops. A British soldier, for the first time in its life in a bankrupt country like Greece, is worth less than its face value in local money. While French is fairly current as a language, English is not spoken at all. Yet despite all of these material drawbacks, the British Tommy in his camp outside Saloniki is so delighted to escape the heat, the flies, the unskated thirst and the stench of Gallipoli that he finds Macedonia a sort of paradise by comparison.

Two Exquisite Waltham Models

The Waltham Opera Watch
Is Very Thin, Wonderfully Accurate and Not Expensive.

The Waltham Wrist Watch
With Disappearing Eye.

The wrist watch is sweeping the country. There was a time when wrist watches were hardly worn by people in this country except those who had picked up the habit in Europe. But the wrist watch is so convenient, so sensible that now everybody is wearing them, sportsmen, soldiers, aviators, society and business women—everybody in fact.

Waltham wrist watches have always been favorites on account of their wonderful accuracy. But now they offer the added advantage of the disappearing eye, an invention by which the watch can be worn either with a bracelet or as an ordinary watch without any suggestion of the bracelet watch. When it is worn without the bracelet, the little eyelet at the bottom disappears, and you never would know that it had been used as a wrist watch.

This new feature is both practical and novel. It is a unique Christmas gift because it is absolutely new and awakens a great deal of interest. And being a Waltham, it is fully guaranteed. Our Waltham Wrist Watches range from $10 up.

Through Turkish Quarter

The road from the harbor to his camp lies through the old Turkish quarter of the town, at a steep angle up narrow, winding streets. From almost every house hangs a projecting second story in which the latticed windows of the haremlik do not always conceal the eager, curious, unveiled faces of Turkish women watching the passers to and fro of many strange soldiers. Shops open their whole fronts direct onto the street. The shoemaker or tinsmith sits, cross-legged, at his work in what would be the show window of a camp-bound Tommy, like everyone else, is forced to bargain for his purchases from the sidewalk—a proceeding which does not improve the already bad traffic arrangements. At the bakeries there is always a mob of clamoring humanity, struggling for the chance to buy the round, flat loaves of black bread, made with fourth-grade flour—the only flour available—of which there is never enough to supply the current daily needs of the inhabitants of Saloniki, the refugees and the Greek army. The foreigners bring their own food with them; if they did not they would run serious risks of starvation.

Easy to Get Lost

At every cross road the returning Tommy loses himself in a dense crowd of Greek soldiers, so slight in comparison with the stocky, deep-chested French, so diminutive in comparison with the tall, wiry British. The Greeks seem to be gathered just where the foreign soldiers must pass in going to and from camp. Whether the purpose be to kite the Greeks an object lesson in soldierly bearing or to impress the allies with the number of Greeks, is not clear. Greek army packmules choke the way at every turn. The streets are scarcely passable. The noise, the confusion, the mixture of half a dozen strangers—all of this in contrast to the silence and the patterning of the wind-blown sand in the desert land of Gallipoli enchants the British Tommy. He is as one intoxicated with a revelation that there is still normal life in the world.

Finally the way to the camp leaves

An Inside Bath Makes You Look and Feel Fresh

Says a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast keeps illness away.

This excellent, common-sense health measure being adopted by millions.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull aching head, slow or complex, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance. (Witness) Irwin H. Hoover.

Submitted and sworn to before me this sixteenth day of December, 1915.

To Herbert Scott Smith, authorized to celebrate marriages in the District of Columbia, greeting: You are hereby authorized to celebrate the rites of marriage between

Woodrow Wilson of Washington, D. C., and Edith Bolling Galt of Washington, D. C.

You are commanded to make return of the same to the clerk of the Supreme Court of said district within ten days, and a penalty of fifty dollars ($50) for default therein.

Witnesseth my hand and seal of said court this sixteenth day of December, Anno Domini, 1915.

John R. Young, Clerk.

the town between the high walls of twin burial grounds—one Jewish, the other Greek. A little farther on is the old Turkish cemetery. But the Turks are no longer masters of Macedonia. The headstones of their graves are scattered and broken; the graves themselves no longer marked. The cemetery has become the corral of hundreds of Greek army mules—the dusty, unwatered cypresses shade the mule drivers rather than the tombs of the Mussulman dead, their faces toward the East. Close by a long series of barracks built of brick shelters tens of thousands of refugees from Macedonia and Thrace and from Serbia, the derelicts of the Balkan wars, enterprising Semitic merchants have even installed barrels of beer in the fields as stations of refuge for the thirsty soldier too long on the way. Beggars of course—cripples, little girls in tattered, hollow-cheeked misery, the old of every race and kind.

Finally the tent city appears, seeming to cover the entire slope of hilltop. The road and a stream separate the French from the British. Along the stream the British Tommies kneel, washing their clothes against the rocks as any French washwoman might. Where the stream trickles over a five-foot rock, making a meager waterfall, a number of men, stark in the chill air, are bathing. Halfway up a slope a squad of signal men are doing drill. The flapping of their flags in the sharp wind can be heard in the valley like a volley of far-away rifle shots. Below them a company is lined up for inspection, each man's roll spread out on the grass while the sergeant goes through the equipment to see that all is there. For the Greeks say that thirsty Tommy sometimes parts with his water bottle or his extra pair of shoes in return for refreshments.

To Keep "Fit"

"Against the sky on the hilltop a squad of men are going through the exercises—"to keep the beggars fit," the officer says. Down a valley be-the practical method of procedure is for General Serrail to suggest to General Sir Bryan Mahan a certain movement in co-operation with his own movements. The suggestion is promptly taken in the best of part, and both armies move together like well regulated clockwork.
