SUPERIOR COURT UPHOLDS NEW ACT OFF FOR CITY'S TREE TOMORROW

Appeals From Public Service Commission Will Go Direct to the Appellate Court

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 20. - The State Superior Court to-day held that it could hear appeals from decisions of the Public Service Commission without the cases first being heard by the Common Pleas Court. Such appeals have been heard in the Dauphin county court. The decision was handed down in the cases of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, the New York and Pennsylvania Company, York Haven Company, appellants, vs. the Public Service Commission, appellee, and the Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad and the Pennsylvania Company, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Company, and the West Jersey and Sea Shore Railroad Company as intervenors.

The case involved an increase in freight rates. The railroad companies contended that the act amending the Public Service law which permits appeals direct to the Superior Court instead of to the county court was unconstitutional.

The Superior Court will hear the cases on appeal next Spring. When the court adjourns its present sitting the case instead of the hearing of cases until February 23 at Williamsport.

The effect of the decision is to uphold the act of 1915 which was passed for the purpose of getting appeals direct into the superior court without the Dauphin county court having anything to do with them. Over a dozen appeals have been pending until the West Virginia company case could be decided.
