WHO'S WHO IN HEAVEN

"Who's Who" has long been the standard social, political, artistic, military, educational and ecclesiastical achievement. But, after all, Who's Who in Heaven? Is not that the big question? To have one's name in a book of successful or famous people—there is something gratifying about that. But every one so included might justly ask himself the question, "How do I stand in the honor roll of heaven?" And those who have never been thought of for any earthly "Who's Who" should not spend a moment's regret over that. They have all the opportunity in the world for winning a high place in the eternal records. There will be some great surprises when these records are disclosed. Two the world already knows of will be among the highest—a poor woman who put two farthings into the temple treasury; another who carried the feet of a blind teacher-healer in a dusty country long ago. But how many more—those who have remembered that, inasmuch as a thoughtful, helpful deed has been done to a child, a prisoner, an invalid, it has been done to heaven's King.—The Christian Herald.

Old Don Mario had long coveted the beautiful Rosa. Now with proof of her brother's complicity with the insurrectionists the way to possession of her seemed clear.

"Marry me Rosa,—the name of Don Mario will shield you and save your brother Esteban from death."

The girl pictured herself fleeing with her brother to the swamps—a hunted, homeless creature.

With Don Mario lay safety through a base and loveless marriage. Could she pay the price?
