THE QUIETEST PLACE. The quietest place in the world is not to be found in the isolated desert, in the islands of the ocean, nor at the summit of a lofty mountain; but, curiously enough, in a town in the Netherlands not very distant from the present war zone. This quiet place is a room in Utrecht, designed for scientific research and built especially to avoid all vibration. Professor Zwaardemaker, a well-known Dutch physicist and physiologist, had it built. An attempt to construct a noise-proof room had been made once before by Professor Wandt in Leipzig, but that was not entirely successful. The means that Professor Zwaardemaker used are worthy to be recorded. In the first place he built three rooms, one inside of another; then, since a vacuum is a poor conductor of sound, he provided facilities for reducing the quantity of air between the walls. The interior walls of the rooms were covered with several layers of material; one layer was of stone blocks, treated in a special process. The cavities between the stones were filled with horsehair; next to the stones were placed layers of wood and cork. The other coverings were layers of lead plate, seagrass, and paper. The walls were further lined with tapestry, to absorb the internal sounds. Not the slightest sound can penetrate to the innermost chamber. In that room there rules absolute silence, a silence that can be found in no other known place on earth. And a few miles away is war. AN AMPHIBIOUS BATTLEGROUND The northern part of Babylonia is generally dry during the greater part of the year. The lower part, near the junction of the rivers, is generally a great malarial swamp overgrown with reeds. In the Springtime one may sail almost anywhere across the country from the Tigris to the Euphrates, and in the dry season great herds of camels, buffaloes, donkeys, sheep and goats graze over the same place. This explains why the war reports describe two battles between the British and the Turks, one a naval battle, the other a land battle, and both fought in precisely the same place. One was when the waters overflowed the valley; the other when the land was dry. But even in the driest of seasons there are great marshes in lower Mesopotamia, and the British soldier who spends a season among them will probably burn and shiver the remainder of his life away with malaria. —The Christian Herald.
