Carlisle, Pa., Jan. 11.—No license advocates in this county have inaugurated their campaign against the granting of license in this county by circulation of petitions of remonstrance against several county hotels. Following a mass meeting Sunday, a petition was circulated against the Franklin House, Carlisle, conducted by C. J. Mahoney, formerly of Harrisburg. The Letort Hotel here and the Boiling Springs Hotel are said to be targets for the dry forces and will be protested in the session of court to be held on Monday, January 31.

Carlisle, Pa., Jan. 11.—The reported pending decision of the new board of county commissioners to revoke the checker playing privileges of the Cumberland county courthouse is causing much discussion among followers of the game. For the greater part of a century this amusement has had its headquarters in the county buildings and the proposal to put an end to it is meeting with some opposition.

Since the present courthouse building was built, about half a century ago, there has been a special room for the checker players, some times in one location and again in another but with every change and improvement arrangements have been made for the accommodation of the players. # BREAKS A COLD IN A FEW HOURS

The Message. — By A. J. Dawson. (Published by The Page Co., $1.25 net.)

"War Extra! War Extra! London Captured by the Germans!" is the headline that will catch your attention in looking over the varied list of fiction, history, and biography that nowadays makes one's brain whirl in the effort to know just what to read, "The Message" is a striking story in which the author forecasts the mighty struggle now being enacted on the stage of Europe, and it is, in truth, a fanciful flight of the imagination upon which the reader is taken. The plot involves a German invasion of England and the capture of London by Kaiser's army, and finally portrays the ultimate result of the war—an alliand and the capture of London by the Kaiser's army, and finally portrays the ultimate result of the war—an alliand and the capture of London by the Kaiser's army, and finally portrays the ultimate result of the war—an alliand and the capture of London by the Kaiser's army, and finally portrays the ultimate result of the war—an alliand and the capture of London by the Kaiser's army, and finally portrays the ultimate result of the war—an alliand and the capture of London by the Kaiser's army, and finally portrays the ultimate result of the war and the two threads are woven together throughout.

the Red Cross nurse, and the two threads are woven together throughout.

Perhaps the best idea of how the story goes may be had from a logical linking together of some of the more important chapters which make a readable whole, as follows: A stirring week closes with an unusual Saturday night in London. The demonstration in Hyde Park is followed by the authentic news and Sunday night long to be reme ibered. Follows a tragic week concluding with a black Saturday, proving England to be asleep. Wake, ened at last, preparations are made, the sword of the lord is brought into glay, blood proves to be thicker than are water and hands are stretched out across the sea. Penalty, peace and the great alliance, and then—curtain.
