When is an amateur a professional is a question which has finally drifted into the tennis game. Maurice McLoughlin and Thomas Bund, two of the most noted tennis players in the country may lose their amateur standing because they have opened up a sporting goods store in San Francisco.

The big point made by the antitrade apostles of tennis is that the cracks are seeking to make capital of their tennis prowess. The rule in point is quoted as follows:

"An amateur is one who is not connected with the sale of tennis goods, nor with a firm manufacturing or selling tennis goods, except when such connection shall be of a general nature in a firm manufacturing or selling general athletic goods, and the person so connected has to do with tennis goods is to no greater extent than with any other line of goods."

A JAPANESE WOMAN BANKER
Eighteen years ago, when I was here, audiences were small and the government schools were closed to Christianity; the churches were shabby and the forms of worship ragged, and the temper of the nation was distinctly anti-Christian. Now, great congregations come to hear the preaching. Worship has grown far more fervent. The nation openly confesses its need of religion. I wish you could have seen the eager faces of the students, or looked at that great gathering of attentive men in Osaka and heard old Mr. Morimura, the millionaire business man from Tokyo, speak to them of the nation's moral needs, which could only be met by faith in God. Another interesting character whom we met was Mrs. Hiraoka, a member of the great Mitsui banking family. She herself owns a number of banks. She is a little, energetic, bustling woman, very masterful in her ways, who made old Mr. Morimura and the rest of us stand around and take our seats.
