Club Changes Ownership on Thursday; Famous Managers Help in History Making

By Associated Press

New York, Jan. 18.—The change in ownership of the Chicago National League baseball club, which will be completed when Charles W. Weegh-man and his associates pay to Charles P. Taft $400,000 balance due on the half-million transaction, marks an epoch in the history of one of the famous clubs of professional baseball. Since the Chicago club was organized in 1876 it has always held a prominent lace in the professional game.

During its existence of forty years many championship pennants have een nailed to its flagpole. Probably no other club in the senior major deague has been so fortunate finan-cially, as money or the lack of it has never troubled the Chicago manage-never troubled the Chicago management.

At all times the owners of this organization have endeavored to secure the services of great players regardless of cost, as the roster shows, and this has been one of the strongest factors in the club's success.

In forty years only six men have held the majority stock in the club, the recent deal having transferred control into the hands of Charles W. Weeghman, so that owners of the team have been few. William A. Hulbert and the late Albert G. Spalding organized the team in 1876.

Some Famous Managers

Some Famous Managers

Frank Chance was made manager in 1996. He won four pennants and two world's series. Chance resigned in 1912. Johnny Evers succeeded Chance in Chicago as manager, but after a wrangle with Murphy was traded to Boston. Then Hank O'Day, the veteran umpire, became the Cubs' pilot, but after a single season's handling of the steering wheel was deposed and Roger Bresnahan was placed in charge, to be followed, in all probability, by Joe Tinker next season.

In point of continuous service, however. Captain Adrian C. Anson holds the Chicago record as manager. Anson was appointed in 1877 and held the position until 1897, during which terms the club won five pennants. Anson's last championship victory occurred in 1886 and it was not until 1996, twenty years later, that the pennant visited Chicago again through the efforts of Frank Chance.

Anson was succeeded as manager by Thomas E. Burns in 1897 and two years later Thomas J. Loftus took up the managerial reins and held them for a similar period. The late Frank Selee took the team in hand in 1902 and they finished at the top of the second division that season. In the three following years under Selee's management the Cubs finished third, second and third in the pennant races, and then Chance stepped in to bring them to the front in 1906.

It is built especially for the person who needs an efficient and comparatively inexpensive conveyance of very tively inexpensive conveyance of very simple construction. The power plant consists of a 1½-hp. motor mounted in the front wheel, which is made of pressed steel. A gas tank of 1-gal. capacity, sufficient for 100 miles, is clamped to the handlebars. The front wheel is flexibly attached to a three-stem fork and directly connected with the motor by means of a compensator. The advantages cited for the driving arrangement are that the weight of both the rider and engine is equally distributed, and the vibrations of the motor are not communicated through motor are not communicated through the frame. A speed range of from 5 to 25 miles an hour is provided. The cycle has a wheel base of 43 in. and weighs 115 pounds.

BABY BOXES

"In practically all South American cities are windowless buildings, with apertures wide and deep enough to permit the placing there of an unwanted baby. The little one is dropped in the open side of a half-barrel or box just within the aperture. The one putting in the baby cannot be seen. The barrel is rotated on the inside, the baby taken out and no questions are asked. The barrel is then made ready for the next arrival. These bables are usually put in at night. In one of these institutions the bables were said to die off like files. This is not true of all, for the general plan is to care for the children until grown and then place them out. The Society of Public Beneficence is reported as responsible for the maintenance of many of these buildings, and charities similar to this are supported in part by the profits on the public lottery system, which is continent-wide. Such a convenient plan of disposal of babies fosters the spirit of immorality which is one of the curses of that continent.—The Christian Herald.
