If back hurts or Bladder bothers, stop all meat for a while.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog your must relieve them, like you relieve your boweis; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, slizy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of reddiment, channels often get sore, zater scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablesyoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then actine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon julce, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Habits, Care and Feeding of Indian Runner Ducks

Correct Care and Feeding

on a new basis, and they have to be retamed.

Habits as Affecting Laying
The Runners have an unusually strong sense of locality, and become devoted to their own quarters, whether first chosen by themselves, or made theirs by long association, though imposed on them at the first. It is impossible to mix two lots upon first placing them together, though they accept new intimates after becoming habituated to them. Because they lay so much stress upon their wonted or favorite surroundings and take so much solid comfort in the places and conditions which they love, this has a very close bearing on their laying habits. In small numbers, they can be worked each to her individual trapnest, but they do not like to be alone.

These birds show as much snug satisfaction as a kitten with what suits them; and because they are so "set" chopped green feed. This is fed twice the laying season, unless this be absolutely necessary to his other plans. For every change of this nature is immediately reflected in a drop in the egg record, unless strongly forced feeding is part of the system. Even then, failure to eat may stop laying.

mains to make them always inordinately suspicious when in confinement, for confinement typifies to them bonds and danger.

Domestication is not necessarily close confinement. The feeder, if friendly, becomes to the Runners an intimate, to whom they tell their troubles, and for whom they develop respect and affection; to whose voice, also, they come to give instant obedience. The mature birds are very intelligent, never forgetting that which is once learned and seeming to make logical deductions. They are social to a degree, and though most exclusive toward strangers, deeply attached to their own companions.

The ducklings can be grown to the first feathering stage in close confinement. If they have a quiet, confiding mother, they will eat out of hand and "walk all over" the feeder. With the first feathering, at about seven weeks of age, the instinct of self-preservation invariably develops, and at this time their life is reorganized on a new basis, and they have to be retained.

trapnest, but they do not like to be alone.

These birds show as much snug satisfaction as a kitten with what suits them; and because they are so "set" in their own ways, it behooves the handler to turn this to his own benefit, taking strict pains to humor them when possible. This means that he shall on no account break up their innocent habits by changes of yarding, locality or companions, during

One of the oldest breeds of fowls is the Dorking, of which we illustrate here the Silver Gray variety. The Dorking is thought to have been brought into England by the Romans, and in /England it has reached its highest state of perfection. It is peculiar in that it has five toes, which are found only in few other fowls, the Japanese Silky, Sultan Fowl of Turkey and the Houdan of France. The males weigh from seven to eight pounds, and the females five and half to six and a half pounds. As a table fowl it has long been the standard of England, and it would probably be more widely bred in this country but for some features which are not suited to American markets; large combs and wattles, the fifth toe, and what is more imporant, light-colored legs and skin. The latter is probably the real reason for its lack of popularitc, since our markets demand a yellow-legged and yellow-skinned fowl. Not that this actually affects A Sure Egg Producer
