"Let's go somewhere and dance," said Mrs. Stevens as they came out of the heated theater.

"All right," agreed Warren readily, "how about the Tip Top?"

"Sounds good to me," from Mr. Stevens, who was always ready to go where the crowd wished.

"How about you, Helen?" said Warren. "What's the matter? Didn't you like the play?"

"You know I did, dear. I was crazy about it. I have wanted to see it all year, you know."

"Thought you were quiet, that's all. You want to go somewhere and dance, don't you?"

"Of course I do," Helen was silent because she felt almost ill. The air had been close in the theater and coming out into the cold, frosty air of the Tip Top had made chills go up and down her back.

Warren led the way into the prominent Broadway restaurant and the rest followed him upstairs, all joking and laughing. They waited a few minutes for the waiter to get them a table and Mrs. Stevens leaned forward and asked Helen if she felt ill.

"I felt strange when we came out of the theater," returned Helen, "but I feel better now. I felt so cold and funny."

"I hope you're not going to be ill, you know?"

"What's this?" said Mr. Stevens. "Helen felt strange and I told her to be careful," explained Mrs. Stevens.

"But I'm fine now," said Helen. "And I feel as if I could eat anything."

The room was filled with tobacco smoke and Warren followed the waiter down between the tables to one set for four.

"This all right?" said Warren. "Sure it is. Well, what are we going to have?" said Mrs. Stevens.

"Hungry?" queried Warren, turning to Helen. "You don't feel sick, do you, dear?"

Warren gives the Orders "Not a bit now," returned Helen brightly.

Warren ordered several things and then asked Mrs. Stevens to dance. Helen was left with Mr. Stevens, who danced indifferently and was not as anxious to perform as his wife.

"Well, shall we try?" he asked as the music swung into something that he began to hum under his breath.

Helen stood up and again the deathly sick feeling swept over her. She fought it back, however, and in a few minutes felt better again. The dance and the exercise brought her blood into circulation and by the time she returned to their table she was better again.

She decided not to mention it to the others and Warren, who noticed that she looked pale, ordered a hot drink for her.

"Drink it right down," he ordered, "and you'll feel better."

"But I feel all right," said Helen, protesting. "It will go to my head."

"Nonsense, not this." And Helen obeyed him and drank it off.

"Now, try to eat something." The waiter placed a chafing dish on the table and the tempting smell of lobster a la Newberg came to Helen's conclusions.

"It smells good, doesn't it?" said Mrs. Stevens. And then, as the music began again, she said:

"Come on, dear, I want to show you that new step."

Helen was left alone with Warren, and now that the excitement was wearing off, she began to feel faint.

"Why not, the evening's just begun."

"I know dear, but I really ought to get home. I don't know what the matter with me, but I really don't feel well."

"Didn't that drink do you any good?"

"Yes, for a few minutes, but the feeling comes back, and my head aches terribly."

"Where else do you feel bad?"

"All over. I feel cold."

"That's a shame," said Helen. Helen began to nibble at the Newberg as the Stevenses came back.

"What's the matter with you people? Why aren't you dancing?" asked Mrs. Stevens. "I think you're growing awfully pale."

"Helen doesn't feel well," explained Warren. "I think we'd better be getting out of here early to-night, folks."

"No, there's no use of denying it, the feeling comes back and I really think I ought to go home," said Helen, trying to smile. She really did feel terribly ill.

"But you people needn't come just because we are going," protested Warren.

"No, indeed; I wish you would stay, then I shouldn't feel so guilty about it," pleaded Helen.

"But we couldn't have any fun without you, Warren get your check and you men divide it, and then we can go right home." And motherly Mrs. Stevens was solicitous in a moment.

Warren insisted upon a taxi to the subway and by the time they reached their apartment Helen was too ill to get ready for bed. She managed to struggle out of her clothes and Warren brought her a steaming hot water bottle.

"Shall I call up the doctor?" he said, a worried expression on his face.

"Wait till morning, dear, and then if I don't feel better we'll call Dr. Marshall. I think a good night's rest will help me, and that medicine, I'll take a good dose of that."

Helen did not feel as confident as she seemed, to, but she did hope she wasn't going to be very ill.

WENSON HITS BACK AT VARES

Philadelphia Independent Says That This Is No Time to Start a Quarrel

John C. Winston, leader of many reform movements in Philadelphia and the man who advised former Republicans and Independents to unite with the Republican party in the primaries at this time when there is a national crisis, is in the forefront of a movement to be known as the Citizens' League in Philadelphia and incidentally declares that this is no time to start a factional row in the Republican party. Mr. Winston had a meeting yesterday with prominent Independents and renewed his declaration of views. This he followed up with a statement that will attract State-wide attention.

As to Governor and Vares "Now that he has been re-elected for a six-year term I fail to see the force of Governor Brumbaugh's opposition to him, unless it be that he wishes to secure some personal advantage for himself and strengthen the hold of the Congressional Republican organization."

The sincere friends of Governor Brumbaugh made an earnest effort to enlist his support for Mr. Dimmick and if Mr. Brumbaugh wanted to put Senator Penrose out of business, that was the time to do it. He, however, in the enforcement of any principle at that time that might cost him votes among Senator Penrose's friends.

"Since the said editorial refers to my activities in connection with a Republican caucus, I am glad to take this opportunity of saying that my only excuse for any political activity at this time is, that I am very anxious to see all Republicans co-operate for the nomination and election of a Republican President, as I sincerely believe that the welfare of the nation can best be secured in this way."

It seems to me and to many other Republicans that it is peculiarly inappropriate time for the Governor and his allies, the Vares, to start a State-wide factional fight.

"And, by the way, I am not among those who are returning to the Republican party; I am among those who have never left the Republican party, though I have not always voted for its candidates on all occasions, especially in local matters."

Salemanship Congress to Be Held in Detroit July 2

The need for local organizations and a Congress for the exchange of ideas in regard to the failures of certain sales plans has led to the World's Salemanship Congress, which will be held in Detroit, July 2-6 inclusive of this year. Every country in the world will be represented in the Congress, in order to insure the success of which committees have been organized, composed of well-known American businessmen. D. M. Barrows, editor of "Salesman," of Philadelphia; Hugh Chalmers, Detroit; Edward A. Woods, of Pittsburgh; president of the National Association of Life Insurance Underwriters, who, by the way, will address the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce luncheon on next Tuesday; Harry H. Ford, president of the Saxon Motor Co., of Detroit; Frank G. Eastman, of the Packard Motor Car Co., and many others. It is said that if every salesman were able to increase his sales by only $100 per year, there would be an increase of $122,500,000 in sales over the United States.

Threshermen Say Rate of Compensation Is Unfair; to Hold Convention Here

At the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Threshermen's and Farmers' Protective Association, to be held in this city February 15-17, plans will be formulated for fighting the rate of insurance prescribed under the workmen's compensation law. Members of this organization throughout the State want it reduced, claiming that the insurance assessed is out of proportion when compared with rates for other occupations.

The Boy is Father to the Man

Old sayings like this are fraught with the most important meaning. And what will aid the expectant mother in conserving her health, her strength, her mental poise, the presence of vexatious pains is a subject of vast moment. Among the best and most recognized helps is a splendid remedy known as "Mother's Friend." Applied to the muscles it sinks deeply to make them firm and pliant, it thus lifts the strain on the nervous system, induces calm, restful nights of health-giving sleep and makes the days sunny and happy. A bottle of "Mother's Friend" of any druggist and you will then realize why it has been considered true to its name in our best homes through three generations. ALL U. S. IN GRASP OF GRIP EPIDEMIC

Influenza Prevalent in Larger Cities Over Entire Country, Surgeon-General Says in Report

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. The most serious epidemic of influenza ever known to exist in this country was disclosed to-day in reports before Surgeon-General Blue, of the Public Health Service. The reports show that the disease is spreading at an alarming rate and is causing many deaths. Of the larger cities influenza is widely prevalent in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco, Seattle, Cleveland and Detroit—the two latter cities having probably 100,000 cases each. The Federal authorities explain that they are practically helpless to check the epidemic, it must be dealt with by local authorities, who in turn are hoping for co-operation by the public. In the past the Surgeon-General Blue has called for reports from all parts of the country. Some of the despatches were summarized by the Surgeon-General as follows: Philadelphia—Influenza epidemic in the week ending December 31, 141 deaths, of which 77 were pneumonia. During December 88 cases pneumonia. Marked increase in pneumonia mortality. In mortality last week pneumonia was reported in 1,441 cases of pneumonia in the last four weeks over 65. Real department sends out warnings. Last week there were 87 deaths from influenza; 30 deaths from pneumonia, with 606 cases of pneumonia in the last four weeks of which 201 occurred in the last four days. Philadelphia—Epidemic of influenza widespread and sharp increase in pneumonia. Extension of epidemic began December 10; wide spread pneumonia general and estimated at 100,000 cases. Hospital crowded. Twenty-five pneumonia present. Influenza epidemic, pneumonia cases deaths during December. Philadelphia—There were 66 deaths from influenza in December. Five deaths from influenza last week. Philadelphia—Influenza epidemic reported. Philadelphia—Influenza epidemic reported.

DR. DIXON TALKS ON CHILDHOOD

Says That Youngsters Should Not Be Subjected to Exposure to Illnesses

Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, State Commissioner of Health, to-day sounded a warning against exposing children to the dangers of disease because people think that children are bound to get certain ailments anyway. The Commissioner uses some strong arguments. In his remarks he says: "Few people would willingly jeopardize the life and health of a fellow being. Yet many people, who would emphatically deny intentionally doing harm, will endeavor to evade rational restrictions necessary for the protection of others."

"Parents in particular will often assume the responsibility in exposing their own and other people's children which would make them shudder if they appreciated the true seriousness of it. Diseases, whooping cough and a number of the common ailments of childhood are looked upon as inevitable by people who are ignorant of the dangers of these diseases and the possibility of avoiding them. "It is a crime to willingly expose children to disease because of the belief that they will eventually fall a victim to it. The old idea that the diseases of childhood are doubly serious to an adult is untrue. An occasional mild case of a disease in one instance may be responsible for a serious and fatal illness from this same disease if it is communicated to another."
