SOCIETY GIRLS TO MATCH CARS ON SPEEDWAY

New York.—"I want to go after the big records. I want to earn the title of the best woman driver in the country. If I win my first race, I mean to go record-smashing. I shall accept other challenges if I do." That was what Miss Maria Lawrence Wetherill, prominent New York society girl had to say when it was announced that she and Miss Katherine Dahlgren may race their highpower cars against each other on the Sheepshead Bay speedway, this spring.

The race will be no novel affair. Each girl will have her own mechanic and will assume entire charge of her car during the contests. They expect to make ninety-five miles an hour.

Miss Dahlgren first won wide recognition as an expert driver last summer in the Berkshire Hills, with her car, known as the "Little Yellow Streak." Three times in one week she was arrested for speeding and her license was finally revoked.

It was last August when Miss Wetherill first came to the front as another daring aspirant for the speed honors of the Berkshire roads. She challenged Miss Dahlgren then. Then challenge has just been accepted.

Mrs. William Jessup, of Egypt, a former resident of Newville, spoke yesterday to a large audience at the Red Cross committee headquarters of hospital work in Cairo, Egypt, where her husband is secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

Mrs. Jessup said that many Americans and English are connected with the hospital there and that the women strive to do for the patients just what people of this and other lands are doing. Bandages prepared yesterday will be included in a Red Cross box for Serbia containing surgical supplies.

In anticipation of the introduction of increased vocational training in the local High school, Principal C. S. Davis has just returned from New York City where he inspected the Washington and Irving and Stuyvesant High schools, two of the foremost institutions of their kind in the country.

Professor Davis spent considerable time in each of these schools and familiarized himself with the modern equipment and methods there in use. At the Washington and Irving school he saw 8,000 girls at work and in the Stuyvesant building 4,000 boys. Both schools specialize in vocational training.

In recent years vocational training has been added to the curriculum of the Steelton schools. In the Grammar grades sewing for the girls and manual training for the boys is now taught. The High School course now includes applied art, mechanical drawing and a commercial department.

Principle Davis visit to New York was with a view to obtaining first-hand information which will be of use should the school board decide to add courses in sewing, cooking and manual training into the High school. This step was recommended to the board by Superintendent L. E. McGinnis two years ago, as a move which should follow the adoption of vocational training in the lower grades. As the pupils now in the grades advance with the vocational work now required, it will, of course, be necessary to add higher branches of vocational work in the High School.

A Reporter's View of Our Newville Branch

CLEANLINESS, PURITY AND HEALTHFULNESS IS OUR AIM

The Telegraph for some time has printed special articles regarding the various towns in the neighborhood of Harrisburg. In his article describing Newville, the reporter came unexpectedly into our branch there, and the following from his article in last evening's Telegraph tells the condition to be found at all times in our various plants:

"The plant here is one of the most modernly equipped in the country and the management invites inspection at any time. Conditions are sanitary at all times and the plant never has to be cleaned prior to an inspection. It is always kept clean, so that Manager S. C. Sweyer never has to refuse a visitor permission to inspect the plant. Yesterday when a Telegraph reporter visited the milk products building he was immediately invited to go through the various departments. First of all, it must be said, everything was clean, the seven men employed there used sanitary means in handling the milk and samples from every can were taken as the farmers brought them in before the milk was weighed and emptied into the receiving vats. Each farmer is given a number and duplicates are placed on the samples. Should they not meet the standard requirements, the milk is refused. From the receiving vats the milk is taken through pipes to other points, where it is pasteurized at a high temperature, cooled and aled. Other pipes take it to the reservoirs from which the cans are filled for shipment to Harrisburg. "Sterilization" appears to be the motto at the local plant, for each day, before and after the milk is received and prepared for shipment, everything which comes in contact is thoroughly sterilized. Steam pipes are connected to the pipes and machines through which the milk passes and before and after they are used "live" steam is turned in for sterilization purposes. Cans are sterilized daily, too, by steam, and the farmers have their receptacles sterilized before taking them home. Condensed cream and a preparation for bakers and confectioners is among the company's products."
