"THOU FAT PIG!" MAY LEAD TO CHAIR?

Wickersham hopes to convince the jury that Kotur should pay the law's penalty for the murder of Backie on the electric chair.

Following Novokovic's Constable James W. Haines took the stand. It was through Haines that Kotur was brought to trial and the Steeton officer's sleuth-like investigations of the circumstances surrounding the death of Backie, it is believed, should heighten the electrodes about the forehead of Kotur.

What the defense will be would not be forecasted to-day by ex-Recorder O. G. Wickersham and Daniel B. Keane, counsel for Kotur, but it was the general opinion among members of the bar that Kotur would try to save himself on the ground that the death of Backie occurred during a drunken brawl.

By this evening or to-morrow morning it is confidently expected, Kotur's fate will be in the jury's hands.

The Song of Backie Facing the stolid Kotur, Novokovic on the witness stand vividly described the "bear party" at 725 South Third street, Steeton, on the night of December 22.

Kotur, Novokovic and some other companions were sitting at a table with their beer before them when they heard someone outside—singing.

Kotur, feared even by his fighting chums in far-away Bosnia because he was believed to have killed a man in that turbulent part of the Balkans, snarled and strode to the door.

Outside Joseph Backie, singer, caroled cheerfully on.

"Quit it, thou fat 'uše!" Kotur yelled, according to the witness.

And "uše" means "pig"—the impish, unprintable word of the Bosnians.

The Ugliest Word Words followed words and finally Backie strode into the house. Kotur felled him with a blow. Novokovic started fearfully to his room on the second floor. As he turned he saw Backie lying on the floor; over him stood Kotur, flourishing a knife. Backie was not yet dead, Novokovic declared, because he saw the prone man move and moan. And then Kotur crashed his heavy boot heel into Backie's face.

"What do you do, Kotur?" called down the frightened witness from above. "Do you not know that God will not forgive you for what you do?" "Forgive," shrieked Kotur. "You go back to bed and shut up—or I come up and serve you this, too!" That, in effect was the gist of Novokovic's story.

House of the Foreign Quarter Before court adjourned yesterday afternoon the jury had been acquainted with most of the facts concerning the finding of Backie's body.

While Additional Law Judge S. J. M. McCarroll conducted the trial of Nikolo Kotur, charged with murder, President Judge Kunkel and another jury tried Thomas Smith, alias "Country" Smith, a negro, for stealing more than $20 from Mrs. Ella Albright. Smith was also charged with the murder of the woman, but it is understood that the State will ask that the murder case against Smith be dismissed for lack of sufficient evidence to convict.

Prior to adjourning his court President Judge Kunkel selected a jury to try Alma Keane on a manslaughter charge. The defendant must answer the woman, but it is understood that Rockville nearly a year ago while driving her car. The Keane case will follow the Kotur trial.
