RECKLESS DARING OF FLYING FORCE STRIKES TERROR

Siberians Don't Seem to Know What Danger Is; Stop Germans

Headquarters of the Russian Army of the Center, Feb. 17.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The following story of the Twenty-first Flying Column and soon was placed in command of that body.

Russian embassy at Washington. Kalpaschnikoff offered his service to his country at the outbreak of the war and was assigned to service with the Red Cross. He became identified with the 21st Flying Column and soon was placed in command of that body. "The reckless daring of the First Siberian Corps," said Kalpaschnikoff, "is well known throughout Russia. The flying column attached to such a fighting organization has no easy task. In the first days of the war several columns, attracted by the brilliant achievements of that corps in the defense of Warsaw, strove for the honor of working with it, and especially with the famous first division; but they found the work too hard, and the conditions too dangerous, and after brief periods abandoned the task. "The Twenty-first Flying Column which had been with the corps since the end of November, 1914, has proven its worth. It was organized at the expense of a rich patroness, Countess Tolstoy, already famed for the work she has done in the founding of hospitals and feeding points for the sick and wounded. Early in October it did its first work with one of the European corps sent to the relief of Lovitch. At a critical moment, when the enemy had broken through the Russian lines in two places, the column took up its task on its own initiative. The commander, at that time Bashkistroff, dispatched two sections to a neighboring village in charge of Terentzin, son of the Emperor's physician, and myself. "A diplomat and a student neither of whom had even been in war before, could not judge the danger and we rode boldly into the village, half of which had already been occupied by the Germans. The latter opened fire on our sanitary carriages with rapid-fire guns. Part of the carriages were destroyed. We recalled our men and started back as fast as we could. The Germans shelled the road over which we rode to our headquarters, but found that the road from Lovitch had been cut. With the wounded we had picked up we had to make a retreat of thirty-five miles in one night, most of it under the shell fire of the Germans, to Skiermivitz. There we found that the town had been ordered evacuated by the Russian troops and we were practically the only ones left there. The hot fight was in progress outside the city. At the last moment a Russian success on one of the flanks saved the city and enabled the Russians to repulse the Germans. Being the only Red Cross unit on the grounds, as the result of a mere chance, we found and fed, in two days, 3,017 wounded.

Reputed Entire Attack "We were ordered then to move on with the corps of the famous General Mishenko, known as the Cossack Raider of the Japanese war. We took up our work in his advance lines, but at the time the Germans made their second dash on Warsaw. Our corps stood firm for nine days, repulsing attack after attack. This nine days among the Caucasian heroes was the most trying and dangerous, but at the same time the most instructive, of our experiences. In one night seven hundred wounded were found and cared for, the greater part in the trenches under heavy artillery fire. Several sanitars were wounded. "When new corps came to the rescue the Caucasians were ordered to make a rapid move back to join fresh troops and begin an advance together. The move was executed so suddenly and rapidly that the military side had no time to take out the wounded lying in several villages near by. The last section of the column volunteered to creep into the village and rescue the wounded who otherwise would have been threatened with being burned, fire having broken out in several places. Through the blackness of the night, lit only by the bursting shells, we made our way into the village and removed eighty men from the danger zone. The staff considered them lost and upon learning of their rescue General Mishenko called out the heroes of that night, thanked them for their work and made them the subject of a flattering order to his regiment. Immediately after that the commander of the column fell ill and I was left in command.

Aid Wounded, Too "Among the troops whose gallantry stopped the Germans a second time from coming to Warsaw were those of the First Siberian Corps. "For the first time having seen the magnetic Siberian officers," said Kalpaschnikoff, "I decided to offer the services of the column to that brilliant corps. I went to the commander of the corps, General Pleshkoff, who accepted my services. I was fascinated by him, and my impression of him, gained that day, as a man beloved by his soldiers, big-hearted and fatherly, has never changed." "During the long tenure of the line scattered among the German wounded. We found the work almost beyond our capacity, far from a railroad and with the troops always moving on. We formed concentration camps at various points and put students in charge of them. In these camps we collected 3,360 wounded. "To accomplish the rescue," Kalpaschnikoff and the student had to crawl more than a mile along a ditch, but in plain view and in constant range of the German trenches, but, in the words of Kalpaschnikoff, "the German soldiers shot rather badly." "After the Germans left Heinoff the population was destitute and facing starvation. The Flying Column in the succeeding days fed there 22,693 persons besides stamping out an epidemic of typhus fever which for a time threatened to assume large proportions. MRS. MCCLURE BURIED Special to the Telegraph Dillsburg, Pa., Feb. 17.—Funeral services for Mrs. William McClure, mother of Postmaster J. The second meeting will be held Friday evening, February 25, in the First Baptist church, Steelton, and the last one in the Harris A. M. E. Zion church, March 2.

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which, if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body. "If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus clearing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach. Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphate hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do. Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results. —Adv.
