

AGENT BETRAYED U. S. TAX SECRETS REPLY BREWERS

Washington, Feb. 22.—Government officials declining to disclose to S. Frawley, a special agent of the Department of Justice, were employed to obtain some of the evidence being used in Pittsburgh through an investigation of the books of the brewery companies.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 22.—That information on the returns of the Government income tax secretaries of the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury and officers handling it may have access, has been freely communicated to others in charge expected shortly to be put up to Department of Justice officials at Washington with a demand for the removal of at least one Government official as a result of the phase of the Federal grand jury brewery investigation now in progress here.

That they contemplate this step is not denied by counsel for the subject brewing company officials; in fact, there were evidences that they were about to act.

The income tax information, gathered by Special Agent David L. Frawley, of the Department of Justice, in examination of various brewing company books, it will be charged in the petition to Washington, was first communicated to United States Attorney E. Lowry Humes and later to the Federal grand jurors.

Penalty Provided in Law The penalty for a Government official divulging income tax information is dismissal from the service and disbarment ever afterward from holding any office under the Government.

Official of Brewers Refuses to Give Records

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 22.—A sensational turn was given to the Government probe of the Brewery Association of the United States by Attorney E. Lowry Humes, secretary of the United States Brewers Association, refused on the advice of counsel, to produce certain records of the association demanded by the Federal Grand Jury, and also to answer questions put to him by that body.

MR. HARRISBURG TAKES IN SHOW

With "Better-Half" He Inspects Fours, Sixes, Eights and Twelves

I had been noticing quite a bit of advertising in the papers recently concerning the Capital City Automobile Show which is being held in Emerson-Brauntham Implement Company's big building over on the corner of Tenth and Market streets, so, last evening I persuaded the Mrs. to leave the supper dishes in the sink while we took a run over to get a look at the season's best. I had just stepped up to the window to get the tickets when who should I run into but my old college chum, E. R. Johnson who, as I expected, was managing the exhibition.

Once inside the great hall we were given the treat of our lives so far, decorations were conspicuous in green and white everywhere. Smiles—miles and miles of it trailed from pillar to pillar, across the ceiling in graceful festoons, and along all four walls. There were small cedars, ferns and palms on tall stands spaced intermittently throughout the hall, and there were cars, cars, cars—cars everywhere.

There was music, too. My program told me it was Sara Lerner and her orchestra, but I knew that the minute they struck up, for no other can extract such music from rosin-ed horses.

However, we came to look around and admire the car we should like to own. You see, we've saved up a neat little sum to invest in a "buss" as the boys call it, and I'm going to get it by the city editor I hope to make enough out of it so that together with what we've saved we can talk business with some of those silver-tongued fellows.

As I said, we came to look around but we hadn't been long before an old friend, George B. Zech, approached us with: "May I show you a new model of touring car? Six cylinders, 45 horsepower, 115-inch wheelbase, and the most popular six ever built." That lent all the more interest to the car. The Mrs. liked it too and came within an ace of making an appointment for a demonstration, but I urged her on to the next exhibit, that of Monn Brothers, who are handling the "Paterson, a classy looking seven-passenger. There we were met by Luther G. Monn, who, thinking he had a real live prospect gave us a little of the same old story.

This car makes its reappearance in Harrisburg this year in the popular-priced field, selling at $850, and represented by the Auto Sales and Distributing Co.

STORY OF CABARET IN COURT TODAY

of the hotel met, drank and left the place in pairs; of the curious relationship between the Savoy and Nos. 135, 137 and 139 South Third street, and of the "little house just round the corner" on Mulberry street; and how James J. McClellan, the proprietor, and two women whom the witnesses said were his wife and mother helped conduct the place.

The Painted Women The names of the painted women of the tenderloin who had been mentioned at the hearings of the St. Charles and the Harris remonstrances figured again in the tales of the Savoy. One of the women whom the witnesses said were his wife and mother helped conduct the place.

The Locked Door Just before Mr. Berger began a rigid cross-examination as to the question of Guyer's attack on the reputation of the girls of the "green room," Guyer told of the last effort of himself and the Rev. Klaier to get into the cabaret.

The Visit to the Green Room The hearing of the remonstrance against the transfer of Fred W. Ebel's license from the National Hotel, Fourth and State streets, to 1802 North Sixth street, was to have been heard to-day but because of continued absence from the city of counsel it was continued until Friday.

The Meeting "We sat down at a table together," went on the witness after a while a young man came in and sat down at the same table. He hadn't been seated long until a young girl took a seat next to him and the youth had ordered drinks for the two of them, they both left the place together.

"Did you see any other women come in to have company with Harry Sausseman, counsel for the remonstrants?"

REWARD OFFERED FOR FIREBUG

detective bureau, admits that he is baffled and says he had no clue as to the identity of the wielder of the firebrand. He believes, however, that it is the work of some demented person, and this theory may be correct. It is yet to be learned, however, whether the continuing arson is the work of some demented person or whether it is the result of well-planned effort on the part of a group of firebugs.

Use Oil-Soaked Waste In nearly every case the incendiary has used oil-soaked waste to start the fires, and up to the present time this is about all that is known concerning the methods used by the criminal, except that he goes from place to place, starting a new blaze while the firemen are fighting one previously started in some other section of the Hill.

The Offer of the $50 reward is open to everybody and the Telegraph can only hope that few hours will elapse before the reward can be legitimately claimed and the criminal brought to justice.

The first series of fires started by the firebug caused heavy losses in the Shimmel, Vernon and Forney school buildings, early on the morning of January 20. Investigations showed that these fires were started with oil and other inflammable materials, successively on the same morning. Late Saturday night and early Sunday morning, the fire department was called out to fight incendiary fires in a lumber yard at Cameron and Mulberry streets, and in three stables all in the vicinity of Fifteenth and Derry street, less than two blocks away from the Vernon building. All of these fires were started with oil and oil-soaked waste.

bolter of the engine drawing the special, exploded throwing wreckage in every direction, especially upon the moving freight train. The engine of the special was thrown down the embankment and was followed by the two two-coaled rollers, one after the other before touching the bottom. The tracks within a moment were piled high with wreckage, beneath which could be seen the bodies of a man and a woman.

Car Roll Over Bank It was not believed that anyone was fatally hurt on the Connecticut river special. Most of the passengers in the special were from Hartford and New Haven and way points.

On the north, Trebizond is threatened, the Russians having pushed close to the Black Sea coast in their operations along the coast, while the Russian forces from Erzerum are reported nearing the coast city.

Military operations in European territory are continuing relatively important, no extensive movements being under way on either their western or eastern front, so far as the official bulletins indicate, while conditions in the Balkans are comparatively quiet.

Smoothing Difficulties Differences between Greece and the entente allies over military questions appear to be in a way to be smoothed as the result of a visit of General Sarraill, the French commander in the Balkans, to King Constantine. The king has expressed himself as confident that the interview marked the first step toward the end of the difficulties.

Four Killed in Raid The Austrians are continuing their air raids over Italian territory. The latest flights were across the province of Brescia and towards Milan. Rome reports four persons killed and five wounded with only slight material damage.

Change French Position The forest of Givency, east of Souchez, in Northern France, near the Belgian border, has again been the scene of sanguinary fighting, with marked advances on the part of the French. A strong attack by German infantry developed in this sector last night, resulting in the capture of 800 meters of French positions.

Another German advance, at Brabant-sur-Meuse, is admitted by Paris.

JUDGE KUNKEL IS AGAIN UPHELD

United States Supreme Court Decides on His Interpretation of Tax Case

Telegrams were received at the State Capitol to-day that the United States Supreme Court had upheld President Judge Kunkel, of the Dauphin County Court, in his decision that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania could tax the premiums paid on bonds of federal officers in Pennsylvania. The case was decided in the Dauphin county court on the appeal of the Fidelity and Deposit Company, of Maryland, against Judge Kunkel's ruling that the State had the right, and the State Supreme Court subsequently affirming his decision without an opinion. The company then appealed to Washington.

The case was argued in the Supreme Court on January 6 by Deputy Attorney General W. A. Hargest and the court has upheld the State contention and sustained the Dauphin and State courts.
