DR. WOLLE GIVES A BACH RECITAL

Greatest Living Interpreter of Bach Plays in Zion Lutheran Church

Zion Lutheran Church was filled to overflowing last evening by an audience which greeted the eminent organist, Dr. J. Fred Wolle, whose reputation as a leader is not less deserved than is his splendid equipment for organ work.

Among Bach's pupils was one Johann Theophilus Goldberg, who had been brought to Dresden, while still very young, by Baron von Kayserling, Kayserling's health was feeble and he suffered from sleepless nights, and at such times he had to have his melancholy dispelled by soft and somewhat cheerful music.

Most delightfully original are these small pieces, and by reason of the great number of variations, the organist was afforded an opportunity to display a wide versatility in the matter of registration and consequent tonal effects; for example, the "Chaconne" was made very interesting by being written as a canon in the right hand and flute and oboe, alternating with strings in the thematic imitation.
