Wages Increased 51/2% Food 40%

The coal miners justify their demands for a 20 per cent. increase in wages by claiming that while food prices have advanced 40 per cent. in 12 years; wages have increased only 51/2 per cent.

Besides a 20 per cent. increase in wages, the miners demand an eight-hour day and many other considerations.

It appears that the operators will refuse these demands and a compromise will have to be made.

The contract between operators and miners expires March 31. Until an agreement is reached mining operations are likely to be suspended.

Better have enough coal in your cellar to last until warm weather. It may be difficult to buy after April 1st and we advise you to have a supply on hand.

SUGGESTIONS TO SICK WOMEN

How Many Are Restored To Health.

First .- Almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women becomes necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful periods, displacements, pain in the side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness. Second .- The medicine most succe ful in relieving female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates and strengthens the organism;

it overcomes disease For forty years it has been making women strong and well, relieving backache, nervousness, ulceration and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pains. It has also proved invaluable in prepar-ing for childbirth and the Change of Third .- The great number of unsolicited testimonials on file at the Pink-ham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, are proof of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com-pound, in the treatment of female ills. Fourth.-Every ailing woman in the FOUTER.—Every alling woman in the United States is cordially invited to write to the Lydia E. "Time was when orchids was an ambition; now they's jest a business In Eurup, it's some different. They's collectors hankerin' after new varie-ties an' houses that keeps men lookin' for 'em but in America, you ma'k me. if an orchid don't make up well on the missus' bodice or on the table, it ain't business; an' they's a few million children growin' up to the idea that if it ain't a Cattleya it ain't an orchid." Kemp came to himself, blushed and hurried out as if on urgent business. Lieber looked at Gerry's thoughtful face and smiled. "Who'd have thought he'd ever talk that way in daylight?" he said "I think," replied Gerry, "it was your offering to let him make this place his headquarters. It rattled him and started him off. I could see he was grateful."

'Perhaps that was it," said Lieber. "He's a queer one. He never asked me. It just occurred to me to suggest it because I'm getting to enjoy having Kemp around." Gerry nodded. His eyes fell on the clock and he got up with a start. The sun was at its highest when he reached Fazenda Flores. "Thou hast been way a long time," said Margarita reproachfully.

Gerry jumped off his horse and kissed her. Then he picked up his son and set him in the saddle. Mar-garita screamed. True Blue arched his neck and looked cautiously around at his featherweight burden. The young horse stood very still while Margarita fought past Gerry's arm and dragged the Man from its perilous perch to her bosom. And manlike the Man protested with a bad-tempered. whole-lunged wail that rent the air nd brought Dona Maria to the corner of the house to peer at them with eves shaded under cupped hands.

A few days later the rains came in with Lieber for labor to be paid for in produce. Fazenda Flores blossomed and bore fruit. People began to come in from afar to barter for produce and a buyer appeared and took over the whole of the little cotton crop. Gerry poured money into Margarita's lap-more money than she had ever seenand sent her under escort of Dona Maria and Bonifacio and the Man to purchase all of comfort and furbelows' that the tiny market of Piranhas could supply. They were to be gone two days and Gerry left the Fazenda in charge of his foreman to go and spend the time with Lieber and Kemp. He found Kemp in a sort of controlled elation over the greatest shipment of commer-

Three herders threw themselves on to their horses and rode, shouting, after helfer. Kemp straightened out his hat. put it on, and walked sedately over to the veranda. drought that will long hold the blackest page in the annals of the San Francisco basin. It seemed but days after the rains when the sparse grass and new-leafed bushes of the wilder-ness began to shrivel up. Day after day the sun leaped brazen, from the horizon to the sky, his first level rays searching out the scant, stored mois-ture of wilting foliage, and the very sap of the hardy brush. While the cattle were still fat they became weak and turned to cactus for nourishment. They broke down the sickly branches with their horns and rubbed them in the sand to free them of the worst of the thorns. Herders rode the rounds on weakening horses and dismounted time and again to pull out spines from the snouts of passive, panting cows. Bulls died of broken pride. They would not subject themselves to the pain of eating cactus. The river-the great river-was no longer great. It grumbled with a weak voice from deep down in the gorge. Gerry watched its falling level with anxious eye and one day sent an urgent call to Lieber for

Then the smile left his face. He remembered the argument. The instinct we all have for superhuman truths tells us that it is dangerous to be si-lent with those we would keep at a distance, for words pass and are forgotten between men, but silencegotten between men, but silence-ate-tive silence-is forever ineffaceable. True life—the moments of life that leave a trace-is made up of silence. Not passive silence; that is but anoth-er name for sleep. But the active si-lence that breaks down barriers, pierces walls and turns the life of ev-ery day into a life where all is intense, where there is no ban—nothing forbidden—where laughter dare not enter, where subjection is submerged and where all-all, is remembered. Gerry felt that this active silence

He stopped and silence fell upon them again. Lieber stared straight in front of him, out into the night. His face worked as though he were struggling to keep his lips closed. When he began to speak again, the words were scarcely audible. "I don't know why I want to tell you two about why I am here, unless it is that as we sat here so quiet I felt that you knew it all-that you knew all that I know and that I was on the point of knowing all that you have known. Lieber came. He brought with him an army, every man bearing with him the tool that had come soonest to his hand. Spades were few and hoes; the bright shares of a pick or two caught the light like lances. Most of the men depended on the heavy short of the new depended on the heavy short halves they carried at their sides. They looked like an army of sansculottes as they swarmed into the ditch and become the disc large short had began to dig. In two days they had sunk it to the required level. When they finished Gerry role back with

Kemp had stayed in sole possession at Lieber's. Digging was not in his line, so he had volunteered to hold the fort against the return of the garrison. He welcomed Lieber and Gerry son. He welcomed Lieber and Gerry to a supper of his own making in ap-proved cowboy style: sour-dough bis-cuits made by a master hand, steaks cuit from a freshly killed calf and fried before toughness set in, a pile of creamy mashed spuds. There was a homeliness about the meal that made them eat in silence. They felt as though for years they had been worshiping false culinary gods. The pile of steaks, the heaped potatoes, the hot biscuit, were exotics, strayed into a
