"BOHEMIAN GIRL" AT THE ORPHEUM

Charming Opera Revived by Aborn Opera Company is Splendidly Rendered. A pleasure indeed it is to be privileged to hear, be it though but occasionally the melodies that have lived in the minds of the music-loving public over a span of years. Just such opportunity was seized by a moderate sized audience last night at the Orpheum when the Aborn Opera company presented Balfe's "Bohemian Girl." Not one whit of the charm has gone from the old melodies, "I Dreamed I Dwelt in Marble Halls"; "Then You'll Remember Me"; "The Heart Bowled Down," and several others equally popular. In almost every instance the audience demanded encores to these numbers which have won such popular approval. The Aborn Opera company is not an innovation; it has been heard here upon several occasions, each time in opera sung in English. The company which appeared here last evening was at times just a bit ragged, although there was some really good ensemble work. The solos were exceptionally good and at all times showed a remarkable sense of interpretation and acting. There seemed to pervade the chorus a bit of indifference, which they could not shake themselves free. Edith Allen as Arline, George Dunstan as Count Arnheim, Henry Taylor as Thaddeus, Francis Tyler as Devilshoof, constituted a quartet of principals of note. Their voices in the few trio and quartet numbers blended well, a fact which found appreciation from the audience.

Paramount Co-operates With "Bette Babies"

Motion pictures have been pressed into service in the nation-wide effort to have every mother receive the proper and worthy information about the nature and care of young babies, and during the coming three months the Paramount Pictures Corporation, through the forwarding of a special department for the forwarding of the movement of better babies. This work is being done under the auspices of the National Federation of Women's Clubs of the United States and the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor at Washington.

The picturing of the section of the "Bette Babies" is one of the most unique pieces of motion picture photography that has ever been accomplished. In the earliest release, where the mother is shown in the kitchen, she is treated, the child, but four months old, is indeed the center of attraction. The babe, it seems, is a very chubby, ever-awake, in the morning, and cries to the nurse, "I want my bath," and the nurse is about to take the child from the crib it appears to cry, "Don't take my bath," and she is shown with it with care. When they reach the tub the child seems to say, "The water is hot," and she is shown in the bath in a screaming success and after the child has been carried back to its room to be dried it says, "Don't rub me, just pat me," and therefore says, "I don't like to be powdered."
