It is impossible to go into the details of the workings of the camp, but a few extracts from the diary of one who attended the camp last summer will give a pretty clear idea of the nature of the work, and the splendid raining received. A stimulus to energetic effort is offered by the possibility of recommendation as officers which is given at the end of the camp. These recommendations are based on the qualities of leadership shown by the individual during the month. The records are kept by the captain of each company and proud indeed arche few who receive recommendations for captaincies of volunteer troops in time of war.

Diary of a Month at Plattsburg

Monday-July 5:

First day of camp. Received equipment including mess kit, two pairs of breeches, two campaign shirts, one hat plus hat cord, one pair of leggings, one dress blouse, gun bayonet, poncho, four blankets, cartridge belt, marching kit, "pup" tent.

Tuesday—July 5:

Tuesday—July 6: Tuesday-July 6:

Tuesday—July 6:

Rose at 5:45 in a hurry in response to bugle call. Entire morning a jumble of drills and running around with gun on shoulder. Sewed buttons on shirt and dug trench around tent to catch rain. Star Spangled Banner at retreat sent thrills up and down spine. Springfield rife fascinates. Wednesday—July 7: Wednesday-July 7:

Wednesday—July 7:
Had first instruction in extended drill work. Practiced skirmish formations dashing madly across open hilly spaces and then falling flat in mud to shoot at enemy. Took an hour off after mess to clean gun. Weather clear but rain to-night. First number of camp paper appeared today and baseball team was organized. Lost needle in trying to sew button on shirt and gave up in disgust.

Thursday—July 8:
Rained all night and all day giving us opportunity to hear lecture on "Camp Sanitation and Personal Hygiene" by camp doctor. Were drilled in stacking guns.

Saturday—July 10:

Sunday-July 11:

Day of rest.

Monday—July 12:
Outline of work for the week includes maneuvers on battle field and patrol work: extended order drill will be taught this week. Company G went on the rifle range. Had skirmish work for the first time with fixed bayonets. Worn out with marching. Several were badly cut with bayonets. Took up map sketching in the afternoon.

Saturday—July 10:

Simple fool next to me insists on calling skirmish "scrimmage." Aired the tents to-day by pulling up all the ropes and assembling around center pole. Had battalion review before the commanding officer. Put on clean clothes and drilled for two hours. Had a good swim. Guard mount was started and entire camp is now being patrolled every night. Forty men coming in late stirred up a row with the sentrys and woke up the whole camp.

Sunday—July 11:

Platisburg. Marched 11 miles and set up camp for the rest of the day and night. Met slight resistance from the enemy's cavalry, which is composed of regulars located at the Platisburg barracks. Appetites enormous by this time. Weather hot but cool little stream runs at foot of the hill where we are camped. No real fighting today. Band concert by the band of the Thirtieth Infantry. Went into little town where we were served lemonade by the townspeople.

Friday—July 30:

lemonade by the townspeople.

Friday—July 30:

Nights are cold and sleeping bag made up of blankets and poncho none too warm. Mother Earth a little hard first night. Responsibilities are increasing. Efficiency and speed in everything are the watchwords. Our squad happened to be the reserve of the advance guard so we were compelled to deploy as skirmishers into the field along the road and advance through bushes. Made ten miles on this morning's march.

Saturday—July 31:

No Economy In "CheapLumber"

How can anybody figure that it is economy to buy cheap lumber?

The low price in itself is proof that it is carelessly made from poor material. Here is a thought which most people overlook - a good dependable article can be made and sold for a cerprice and FOR NO LESS no matter who, makes

It is our aim to sell lumber that will last for yearswhy not buy GOOD, lumber in the first place.
