FLUFFY EFFECTS IN EVENING GOWN
 Blouses and Furbelows Are Worn at All Sorts of Parties
 By MAY MANTON

8803 (With Basting Line and Added Seam Allowance) Evening Bodice for Misses and Small Women, 16 and 18 years.
 8922 (With Basting Line and Added Seam Allowance) Flounced Skirt for Misses and Small Women, 16 and 18 years.

It would be hard to find two materials that combine to give a prettier effect than chiffon with a gros de Londres over-bodice. The contrast is an exceedingly good one and both fabrics are charming in themselves. The gown is a very graceful and attractive one and at the same time a very simple one. The flounces are straight that can be either plaited or gathered and they are arranged over a plain foundation. The little under-bodice consists of a lining which is faced at the arm-holes and to which the sleeves are attached, and the full yoke is arranged over it. The over-bodice is the simplest garment in the world to make. It is closed at the back and the pretty fullness under the arms is held by ornamental buckles. In this case the buckles are rhinestones. The gown can be copied in many different materials and it will be pretty to make the flounces and over-bodice of taffeta for example, with just the under-bodice of net or chiffon or of all-over lace, or, net can be used for both the flounces and under-bodice with the over-bodice only of the silk. Crêpe de chine could be treated in much the same way to be charming and georgette crêpe is most attractive, for it is a little thinner than crêpe de chine and consequently a little more light and airy in effect.

The pattern of the bodice 8803 and the skirt 8922 are both cut in sizes for 16 and 18 years. They will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents for each.

ELKINS FAMILY GIVES PICTURE TO TRIBUNAL
 Philadelphia, March 21.—The gallery of pictures of former members of the Supreme Court yesterday was increased, when an oil painting of the late John P. Elkin was given to the tribunal by his family.

The presentation was made in the Supreme Court room, in City Hall, by Attorney General Francis Shurtz Brown. Chief Justice J. Hay Brown accepted it, and ex-Governor Stone, now Prothonotary of the Court, under whose administration the late Elkin was Attorney General of the State, paid a tribute to his memory. The painting is by Rosenthal.

This is not a guessing contest. We do not know who these babies are. It is for you to decide what names would be appropriate for children such as these. Naming the baby is a serious proposition. Sometimes an ill chosen name will make life hard for the one to whom it is given. Other names are as helpful as others are harmful. The judges will be a committee of prominent Fourth Street Merchants, and they, not us, will decide how good your selection is. We use this method to direct attention to our store and the pianos we sell, as every one takes an interest in a friendly contest.

WOMEN'S INTERESTS

"THEIR MARRIED LIFE"

Copyright by International News Service

"I won't be home to lunch," said Helen, coming to the door of the kitchen where Mary was cleaning silver. "Just have some of that cold meat for yourself and if I am not home in time dress Winifred and take her over to dancing school about halfpast three."

Helen was to meet Carrie and go with a professional shopper to buy a new bedroom suite. Why she had been chosen to accompany Carrie Helen could not determine. If she had known that Carrie had asked her rather than Louise because she knew that Helen would put up with her disagreeable disposition better, Helen might have been indignant. As it was she hated to go with Carrie. When Fred had asked her to do it as a favor, however, she hadn't the heart to refuse. Good natured Fred was so obviously in need of someone to take pity on him.

Helen had demurred at the idea of a professional shopper also. Why did Carrie need a professional and the aid of her sister-in-law, too? But as Fred explained, Helen was to help Carrie with her personal taste while the woman was to point out disadvantages and vice versa.

Helen saw Carrie sitting primly on the edge of her chair as soon as the elevator let her off at the furniture department of Malby's where they had decided to meet. With her was a little woman with faded china blue eyes and a look of bristled that did not go at all with the rest of her appearance. Carrie introduced her as Miss King, and Helen smiled sweetly.

"Have you been looking around?" she inquired of Miss King.

"No, we haven't," responded this little woman in a business-like tone of voice. "We just came a moment before you did."

Helen disagreed.

Carrie rose majestically and the three proceeded toward the bedroom suites. A salesman came up and the task of war began. Carrie in the first place had really no idea of just what she wanted. Miss King knew her business and was extraordinarily well acquainted with the stock. She talked furniture with the salesman as though she had been brought up on catalogs and Helen listened admiringly.

Carrie wanted a thoroughly up-to-date suite with twin beds, and she thought she wanted mahogany. They looked at a very gorgeous suite with wicker insets. The beds were fitted out with beautiful mattresses of a deep orange, and the entire effect was magnificent.

"This is the handsomest suite we have in the store," the salesman said in explanation.

"Yes, but so utterly for show and not for use," said Helen before she thought.

"Oh, not that, Mrs. Curtis," said Miss King.

"What I meant to say was that so handsome a suite is almost too much for people who have not unlimited means."

Carrie, of course, chose to take exception to this remark.

"What is the price of this?" she said haughtily.

"Four hundred and seventy dollars, madam; four pieces."

Carrie looked a little crestfallen and Helen rejoiced wickedly.

"That is expensive," Carrie said, with a little surprise as she could manage.

"How about that mahogany suite

American Men Unfit For War, Says Doctor

Cambridge, Mass., March 21.—"The American citizen is physically unfit for military duty," declared Dr. Dudley A. Sargent, of Harvard, yesterday. Lack of proper physical training is the cause.

"Our forefathers were pioneers, men of hardihood, courage and indomitable will, used to a wholesale mingling of mental, moral and physical hardships and trials. Since that time the paths have grown easier, and weaker stock has followed in the trails blazed by the strong. Love of country, manly vigor and the spirit of co-operation are not too plentiful."

"No people living under the trying conditions of our complex modern life can, in any considerable proportion, withstand the hardships of modern warfare, to say nothing of rendering service, unless they pay considerable attention to counteracting the devaluing and overspecializing tendencies of modern working and living conditions."

ANY SPAN IN NEW BRIDGE MAY BE LIFT SPAN
 A combined railway and wagon road lift bridge across the Arkansas river, near Pine Bluff, Ark., has been built with lift towers which may be transferred from one portion of the bridge to another; the reason for this unusual construction being that the navigable channel is likely to change at times, due to the shifting sands that form the river's bed. The lift span is similar in design and dimensions to five other spans, and should the channel shift, the towers are simply transferred to another span. In the case of a near-by bridge such a shifting of the channel rendered a lift useless for passing boats, so that another had to be constructed. The lift span moves vertically through a height of 49 feet so as to provide a clearance above high water of 50 feet, and above low water, of 90 feet. The horizontal clearance is 225 feet between piers. Ordinary vertical-lift bridges operate with wire cables passing over drums to counterweights. In this bridge flat-link chains are used. The main counterweights are composed of precast concrete blocks, supported in a steel frame. These can be taken apart and moved in case it is necessary to move the lift towers. Several fine views of the bridge are published in the Popular Mechanics Magazine.
