PLAYS AND PLAYERS

"The Heart of Paula," a PallaseParamount picture, has been the inspiration for a song hit from the pen of Palmelia Woodruff and the musical brain of W. S. Charles, and dedicated to Miss Lenore Ulrich. The song abounds in descriptions of burning lips and flashing hair, or eyes, perhaps, but although our musical sense does not permit us to judge of the quality of the ensemble, we can vouch for the words,
We like 'em.

Paste-Pot and Shears, the Selig publicity sheet, has taken into the courts of Cook county. Ill, the matter of the authorship of Shakespeare's works, it is very nice of the Selig Company to offer to have decided by the courts a matter which has puzzled the brains of specialists for many a year and oft, but we doubt whether the courts will be able to decide it satisfactorily. So long as the name of Sir Francis Bacon and William Shakespeare endure, there will be indecision as to who should be given the palm.

Edward Morris, Pianist

This brilliant young artist will appear here to-morrow night in joint recital with William Boyer at the Technical high school at 8 o'clock. Dr. Karl Muck, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, speaks in the highest terms of the young artist, who has been heard before in this his own city. Dr. Muck declares that Mr. Morris, whom he heard in a recital in Cambridge, shows great talent, has excellent technique, touch and interpretation, is, in short, an excellent planist and an admirable musician.

WILLIAM BOYER, BARITONE

Mr. Boyer will be heard here on Thursday night, March 23, in joint recital with Edward Morris at the Technical High School at eight P. M. Below is a criticism from the Washington Society April 3, 1915.

A very interesting recital was given under the direction of the "Chord and String" Club at the Central Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening. The recitalists were Miss Emma Bender, one of the most interesting of young Washington pianists, and William Boyer, who holds the Peabody Conservatory vocal scholarship.

Mr. Boyer sang the "Invictus" of Huhn, "Caro Mio Ben" by Giordami, "Her Rose" by Coombs, Homer's "Banjo Song" and a group by American composers. He has a truly unusual voice and musical feeling and temperament. With hard work he should arrive at a great career.—Adv. WILLIAM BOYER, BARITONE
