

Another Sensational Jewelry Sale

Began To-day at the

"Different Kind of Jewelry Store"

The Entire High-Grade Jewelry Stock and Fixtures of L. Wolf, of Sunbury, Pa., Will Be Placed on Sale at a Straight Reduction of

ONE-HALF The Original Wolf Prices

We have just made the most remarkable cash purchase we have ever made, of one of the finest jewelry stores in Central Pennsylvania, from the trustee in bankruptcy of L. Wolf, of 325 Market St., Sunbury, Pa.

The stocks are of the very highest character in every detail and away above the average for a town of that size. L. Wolf's stock contains almost every conceivable piece of jewelry, watches, diamonds and cut glass that is sold by only the highest grade houses.

Here you will find thousands of dollars' worth of things you will need for your own personal use—for wedding, birthday or anniversary gifts and all at ONE-HALF THE REGULAR WOLF PRICES. To get the full force of this advertisement one must consider that the regular Wolf prices were a great deal lower than they would be for like qualities in a larger town where the cost of doing business would be considerably greater.

The people who have favored us with their patronage since the opening of this "Different Kind of Jewelry Store" have perfect confidence and know that every article of jewelry we sell is just as we represent it to be.

The P. H. Caplan Co. Money-Back Guarantee stands back of every article we sell. We give you our word that this sale of the L. Wolf stock will be the greatest sale from a quality and value standpoint ever held in this city.

U. S. Steel Will Share Millions With Workers

New York, April 19. — Steel mill workers will receive after May 1 the highest wages ever paid in the industry as the result of another increase of 10 per cent., to go into effect that day. The Steel Corporation, the Republic Iron and Steel Company, the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company and the Brier Hill Steel Company announced the increase yesterday, and it is expected that the other leading corporations will take similar action. Chairman E. H. Gary, of the Steel Corporation, said in a statement: "In view of the continuance of prosperous conditions, it has been decided to make advances in the wage rates of our iron and steel companies about 10 per cent., to take effect May 1." The increase of 10 per cent. put into effect by the corporation on February 1, added about $15,000,000 to the annual payroll. It is estimated that the second advance will increase the annual total of wage payments approximately $18,000,000 a year. Common labor will receive $2.43 a day, compared with slightly less than $2 a day last January. The latest upturn, in case of independent concerns which have announced the rise, will apply to men who are not on a salary, it is said.

A FEW MINUTES WITH THE LATEST BOOKS & MAGAZINES

Her Husband's Purse, by Helen R. Martin. (Doubleday, Page and Co., $1.35.)

The popularity with which the dramatized version of Helen R. Martin's "Barnabette" has been received in New York is an added reason why this most recent book from the pen of the local authoress should prove a big seller. Once again Mrs. Martin depicts the speech and customs of the Pennsylvania Dutch, that people so strangely thrifty and at the same time cruelly indifferent to the rights of their wives and daughters, in the delineation of which characters the dramatization of "Barnabette" has proven a stimulative delight to many jaded New York theatergoers.

Margaret Berkeley, in "Her Husband's Purse," is a cultured and gently bred Southern girl who marries one of the new type Pennsylvania Dutch lawyers living in a small town by the name of New Munich. His people are to her strange and difficult to understand, different in every particular from the easygoing, hospitable Southerners whom she has hitherto known. Her difficulty in adjusting herself to her new environment is increased by the domineering manner of her husband and his two younger sisters, and in relieving herself of their tyranny the young wife rudely shatters her narrow-minded husband's conception of all that a dutiful wife should be.

The characters in the book are interesting and true to life, but the viewpoint on marriage therein expressed is rather antagonistic to the old-fashioned idea of love and marriage which is still fortunately adhered to in a large majority of cases.

The Master Detective, by Percy James Brebner. (E. P. Dutton and Co., $1.35.)

"The Master Detective" is a witty-sharpener in a series of short and extraordinary detective stories. It brings back to the reading public an eccentric character named Christopher Quarles, a professor of philosophy who works out all his cases on a deductive basis, queer and uncanny. Assisted by a young Scotland Yard detective, the professor undertakes only those cases which have proven baffling to others.

All of the stories are told in a brisk manner, instead of trying to confuse the reader with much detail. The book gives all the detailed information at the start and if the reader becomes involved in Quarles' method of deduction, it is because the old gentleman uses a method all his own.

The Little Lady of the Big House, by Jack London. (MacMillan, $1.50.) Recently converted into book form, this powerful love drama that was running in serial form in one of the magazines is without doubt one of the most comprehensive and masterful pieces of fiction that Jack London has written. Although the characters are patently impossible in their splendid superlativeness, the book is full of the joy of living and teeming with romanticism and wild adventure.

Fascinating in the power of imagination and visualization, the author has made of his three leading characters, two men and a woman, living, breathing beings that suggest the Superman and the Superwoman. Dick Forrest is a landed proprietor of great wealth and many ideas, a very German military government for efficiency, and a boy in his play moments. His wife, Paula, is a goddess with human traits, mistress of all she surveys and a queen among men. Graham is the third party, a sort of Prince Charming, "world-bitten" yet sweetened by experience. The situation becomes complicated in the course of unconviction in hand, primitive strength typified in the author's own personality inculcated into the very heart of the plot. The wife falls in love with the Prince.

Both man and wife are paradoxical mixtures of glorious manhood and womanhood, the acme of physical perfection, with bodies and minds both steel-forged. Unexpected indeed is the outcome of the complications which arise in the Big House. The little woman, game to the core, solves the problem in a way to bring tears to the eyes of a strong man. The characters are generously drawn and there is nothing petty about the plot—all is treated on a big scale, with a big conception.

EDITOR VERSUS BURGLAR

"Did you ever hear about the burglar that broke in on the Arkansas editor?" The editor was unarmed, so he engaged the burglar in hand-to-hand conflict, and it was only after a terrific struggle that he was able to rob the burglar.—Jack Lait in The American Magazine for May.

A NEW MAGAZINE

Out of the superabundance of magazines and literary periodicals that throng the bookstands and news-dealers, a new publication has this month raised its patriotic head. Its name is George Washington's Magazine and it is published by the Washington Magazine Company, N. Y., with "Uncle Sam, Junior," as editor. Devoted wholly to an exploitation of things patriotic, its editorial policy according to its own announcement, is to make it essentially a means of communication between the boys and girls themselves, a periodical to be edited by them and with contributions from them.

It advises in its first issue that every boy and girl in America who is a real patriot enroll as a cadet in the U. S. Junior Naval Reserve in order that they may be a part of an organized movement to put our country in the place where she belongs in the matter of defense in time of need. An interview with Marjorie Sterrett, the little Brooklyn schoolgirl who conceived the idea of doing something to help her country, and whose idea has resulted in the contribution of over $17,000 by the boys and girls of the country, gives some idea of her home life and the spirited love of country that urged her to act upon patriotic impulse.

NOT ENOUGH EVIDENCE

The jury asked to see the bottle in a Western booze case and a half-hour later they returned and announced a decision: "Your honor, we, the jury, find that there is no case against the defendant, as there is not enough evidence to go around."—The Silent Partner.

MELLEN ASKS COMPENSATION

New York, April 19.—Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, sued that company in the Supreme Court yesterday for $138,222.89. Sixty thousand dollars of the amount was for two years' pay under an agreement with Mr. Mellen said he made with the company to pay him $30,000 a year for five years.

The alleged agreement provided that Mr. Mellen should meet with the officials of the company whenever they wished to confer with him or needed the benefit of his advice.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or cause the teeth like strong liquids or cause the teeth like strong liquids.

It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place. Most headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "lumpy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. At 10c and 25c per box. All druggists. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, Ohio.
