"We must choose something striking—and original," said Mona. "Stale tricks were well enough for these others—but I rather think Mr. James Schoolcraft Harrastford is going to test our mettle pretty thoroughly, Mary! I should hate to think, though, that we were to meet our first defeat at his hands."

"So should I," said Mary briefly. "I've been studying him. I think something savoring of a real romance—something hot and passionate—is what he would like best. I believe he wants to be thrilled. I suspect that most of the women who have given him his ideas have been the best of the easy-going type—or else whiners, like that poor creature who was pestering him the first time we met."

"I shouldn't wonder," said Mona. "What he needs is a woman of real character."

"Yes—and I think a woman of that sort could have held him very easily, any time. If I had been interested enough in him to take the trouble to do it! Mona—I begin to see a way! Do you remember that beauty doctor you were talking about a few weeks ago? The one who guarantees to change your whole appearance?"

"Yes—but we don't want to do anything like that. We've never done anything that made it necessary for us to be disguised, and we're not going to now, are we?"

"Not the way you mean, no. It isn't disguise I'm thinking of—it's a sort of transformation of our interesting character! You see, I expect to strive to create a certain impression in Mr. Jimmy's mind, and I have an idea your beauty doctor friend can help. You're a beauty as it is, and I'm not so bad looking—but we need more—oh, pep! slang does come in handy."

"I suppose I'm stupid," said Mona. "But I do wish you'd explain just what you do mean."

"I will. We're going to fight this campaign out along romantic lines. Well—real romance belongs almost exclusively to Southern races. I think we'll be Corsicans. They bottle romance in Corsica, you know, and export it. We'll be a pair of Corsican sisters."

"Lovely!" laughed Mona. "Oh, I see now. We're going to work in close harmony this time, I suppose."

"Yes. This case calls for a complete change of tactics, it seems to me. So—double harness for us. We love one another very dearly, remember, but that love may turn to hate at a moment's notice. I will, too, if we get Mr. Jimmy in line at the start—which I'm depending on you to do. Maybe I work out our plans, but you carry them out—and the best plan in the world wouldn't be any good unless there was some one like you to execute it."

"What's my first move?" asked Mona.

"I'll tell you after we've had our appearance changed," said Mary. "Telephone for your beauty man to come right along. The sooner that's over the better."

The specialist made no radical changes in either of the girls, but the effects of his work were startling. Both looked swartzier when he had finished, and he had effected a mysterious change even in their eyes, while hair and eyebrows were decidedly darkened. They might have passed, when he had done with them, for members of any of the races of Southern Europe—but for aristocratic members. And in the matter of their manner of dressing that corresponded with their altered features.

They hurried as much as they could without risking the artistic success of the impersonation they intended to give, and yet it was only a few days after they had first laid eyes upon Harrastford that Mona was ready to begin. Harrastford, of course, was wholly ignorant of their very existence; he had been far too busy, and excited, on the day that they saw him, to pay any attention to them, or even to know that there had been any witnesses of the scene in the park.

No one who had known Mona before her transformation would have been likely to recognize her when, one afternoon, she drove in a taxicab to a spot about half a block from the Empire Club—the one of his city clubs, as she knew, which he usually frequented at this time of day. She had a little while to wait, but at last she saw him coming down the steps. She alighted at once, paid her driver, and saw him go off, then, walking slowly, she advanced toward Harrastford, quite elaborately unconscious of his presence.

It was not so with Harrastford. He stared at her quite frankly; her foreign, piquant beauty attracted him. Yet it was plain from her appearance that he could not hope to win her forgiveness should he speak to her. A lucky accident, it seemed to him—he could not guess how often it had been rehearsed—gave him his chance. She dropped her bag, stooped to recover it, and in rising, brushed past him. How profuse were her apologies! She spoke without an accent, but in a way that proved her a foreigner. He assured her the fault was his; she disabused that, presently.

EVANGELIST SUCCESSFUL

Evangelist Davis preached at Harris Street United Evangelical Church Tuesday on "The Unpardonable Sin." A delegation of about fifty people from Lemoyne attended the service and presented Mr. Davis with flowers. Tonight the subject will be "The Perils of a Lost Soul." Mrs. Sarah Earnest Snyder, of Pittsburgh, will address the meeting at 8 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. Evangelist Davis will speak on Thursday evening at 7:45 on "Hell: What Kind of a Place and How to Keep Out."

DEMOCRATS ENDORSE WILSON

Indianapolis, Ind., April 27.—The Democratic convention yesterday elected delegates-at-large to the national convention and nominated by acclamation unopposed candidates for places on the State ticket. Governor Halston was temporary chairman. The platform praises President Wilson's stand on foreign and Mexican affairs, and declares that the record of achievements of the Democratic party warrants its continuation in power, both in the State and Nation.

Big Trial List Adds Extra Week to Carlisle Court

Special to the Telegraph
Carlisle, Pa., April 27.—So many cases are listed for trial at the May term of Common Pleas Court which opens here on May 15 that Judge Sadler by a special order has added a week to the session. The latter meeting of the court will begin on June 5. A feature of court activity is the fact that special paper to secure statements in a case have been prepared to be sent to Italy and Austria, in a suit brought by Guiseppi Promitico, an Italian, against the H. C. Brooks Company, of Martinsburg, W. Va., for damages claimed to have been received while he was on sewer work here.

RUBBER CO. ASKS CHARTER

Special to the Telegraph
Halifax, Pa., April 27.—The Halifax Rubber Company, successors to the A. H. Prenzler Rubber Company, is applying for a charter in this State for the purpose of manufacturing rubber goods of all descriptions. Surgeons' gloves will be the special line. James E. Neitz will be the manager of the new concern. A. M. Smith and P. S. Hill, of Halifax and John H. Klingman and A. G. Bashore, of Millersburg, are the other parties interested.

INDUSTRY HUNTING SITE

Special to the Telegraph
Waynesboro, Pa., April 27.—Simon Weiner, real estate agent here, is in receipt of a letter from a Baltimore representative of large manufacturer of clothing desiring to establish a branch here. They will require the services of 250 girls and women and ten per cent. men workers. The firm wants 10,000 square feet of floor space, and the annual payroll will amount to about $100,000. The matter has been referred to the Board of Trade.

ANNIVERSARY SUPPER

Thompsontown, Pa., April 27.—Sincerity lodge, No. 557, will commemorate the 57th anniversary of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in their hall on Saturday evening, by holding a supper at 5 o'clock, to which the wives and families of the Odd Fellows are invited.

NEW SECRETARY CHOSEN

Mechanicsburg, Pa., April 27.—To fill the vacancy caused by the death of Daniel Morrett, the directors of the Chestnut Hill Cemetery Association met and elected John A. Cocklin, of near Siddonsburg as secretary and A. A. Morrett, treasurer.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; else cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
