Military Cordon Around Dublin Is Tight; Central Part of City Badly Scarred by Fire and Shells; Filled With Refugees; Preparing to Feed Them

BACKBONE OF REVOLT COMPLETELY BROKEN

Side Turned Against Sinn Feiners When They Were Forced From Trinity College; Their Stronghold; Fighting Was Done Mostly Women

Rebels of the rank and file are following the example of their leaders in confessing the cause of the "Republic of Ireland" lost by piling their arms at the foot of the Parnell monument.

The military authorities are taking rigid measures to prevent the escape of rebels. Dublin is badly scarred by fire and shells.

Looting during the revolt was done mainly by women. The death of the republic is as dramatic as its birth.

Sinn Feiners from the country districts are marching into the city in big batches to give themselves up.

Kingston, Ireland, May 1.—The military authorities are taking rigid measures to prevent the escape of the rebels.

A military permit now is necessary to pass through either the inner military cordon or the larger one drawn around the city.
