HARRISBURG NEWSBOYS WHO HAVE HELPED BUILD UP LIVE-WIRE ORGANIZATION HOME

THE STRUGGLES OF A WIFE

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XXV (Copyright, 1916, Star Co.) Myra Webb had never been jealous of her husband. Nor had he ever given her cause to be jealous.

So to-day she felt no indignation at his having lunched with some young woman. She simply wondered who the person was and how it happened that Horace had taken her to Duquesne's.

But she was disturbed lest he might question her as to her presence downtown when he had supposed her to be safe at home—for he might express disapproval of her course of action.

And it was one of these girls to whom she was going this evening. She had invited to her house only such young people as could not entertain so elaborately as to make her feel out of place in their midst.

And she was learning the great truth that wealth and refinement are not always synonymous.

Scolded by Grace Some of the girls who had been mere acquaintances of hers at college were now becoming her friends.

They were not poor girls, in fact were in better circumstances than was she—but they were not of the rich set whom she shunned nowadays.

And it was one of these girls to whom she was going this evening. She had returned from school and was correcting exercises when her mother reached home.

"Where under the sun have you been mother?" she called as Myra entered the door of the apartment.

"Down town," the mother said briefly going on into her own room. If Grace was busy she would not have time to ask inconvenient questions, Myra reflected.

Of this she was glad. But she was destined to disappointment, for in a moment her daughter appeared on the threshold of the bedroom.

"Really, mother, you ought to know better than to go out on such a day," she exclaimed. "If you are no more careful we will have you sick on our hands. It's storming fearfully. Why did you go out?"

"I had business to attend to," Myra replied. "Business that could not possibly wait," the girl demanded.

Then, as the mother did not answer immediately, she added: "It is poor business, or economy, or whatever you call it, to go downtown to see about selling some story or article when you make yourself so ill that your doctor's bills will come to more than the price of the manuscript—even supposing you find a market for it."

"Oh, Grace," the mother exclaimed, a note of exasperation creeping into her voice, "please, my dear, don't be so positive!"

"Excuse me," the girl said stiffly. "I only spoke because I do not want you to be ill. I realize that it is no affair of mine, and that you have every right to be as imprudent as you wish, even though, if you are ill, I will have to take care of you!"

She turned and left the room abruptly, and the older woman stood still, battling with the indignation that made her long to give vent to the torrent of impatient words that rushed to her lips.

But instead she took off her coat and hat and changed her shoes for a pair of slippers, and then, with her temper in good control, crossed the hall and knocked at her daughter's door.

"Come in!" The tone was not inviting, and the eyes raised to meet the mother's were hostile.

"Dear," Myra said gently, "I spoke fretfully and peevishly just now, and I am sorry! Let us forget it, please. I was very impatient, I fear."

"Oh, that's all right," Grace rejoined. "I only meant to protest against your imprudence—but, as I said then, I ought not to have done so. If I do not care about you, however, I would not worry when you risk your health."

"I know dear," the mother forced herself to respond affectionately. "And it was very good of you to think of my health. I went downtown to see about a piece of work that, I hoped, would mean some money, and I do not want to defer making arrangements about it. You now one likes to get such matters settled."

"The arrangements could probably have waited until the sun shone again," Grace observed practically. "But let us talk about something else. I am wondering what to wear to the Dakins' to dinner this evening. Oh, dear! I wish I could manage to squeeze out enough money from my salary to get a new dress."

"I wish you could, dear!" the mother echoed. "In her heart she was already wondering if she might not use a little of the money she hoped to get from her next story towards a new evening gown for poor Grace."

She tried to be happy in planning things for her child, and not to think of her own ungenerous and Grace sometimes were.

Harrisburg may well be proud of the record set by the newsboys of the city who one year ago organized the Harrisburg Newsboys Association and since that time have set a record for boosting their organization.

Shortly after they formed the association, rooms were rented at 304 North Second street, shown to the left in the above picture. In the meantime plans were started for a newsboys' home and funds are already in the treasury. Other big schemes are under way to raise money for the project.

Some of the boosters who have brought the association to the front rank are shown here. In the top row from left to right are: Wagner Hoffman, retiring president, after serving for one year; David Klawansky, secretary and a member of the board of governors; Park Weaver, re-elected vice-president at the meeting last night; J. Darrow, member of the board of governors; Bernard Koplovitz, re-elected secretary. Bottom row, left to right: Arthur Koplovitz, retiring treasurer, elected trustee, and the Rev. E. P. Robinson, affectionately called "The Newsies' Guardian," because of his untiring interest in the organization, and the advice he has given them; Michael Klawansky, treasurer, and on the board of governors; Samuel Koplovitz, president, succeeding "Wag" Hoffman, and James Bloom, retiring financial secretary.

During the week the boys are celebrating their first anniversary with special meetings and entertainments each night. This evening they will meet at their rooms at 7:30 o'clock and then proceed to the Victoria theater where they will be the guests of the management. To-morrow night an illustrated lecture will be given by the Rev. Mr. Robinson, and on Friday night an elaborate banquet will be held with William Strouse as host. A number of addresses will be made during the evening.

Officers elected at the meeting last night follow: Samuel Koplovitz, president, to succeed Wagner Hoffman, who declined re-election; Park Weaver, vice-president; Bernard Koplovitz, secretary; David Rosenberg, financial secretary; Michael Klawansky, treasurer; Wagner Hoffman, Arthur Koplovitz and Samuel Klumpus, trustees.

PUSH WORK ON NEW M. E. CHURCH

Camp Curtin Memorial Will Celebrate Anniversary May 28

Work on the new Camp Curtin Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church is progressing rapidly and the first large iron roof truss has already been raised and placed on the wall.

William Berke, foreman of the job, is pushing the work to get the building ready for Fall dedication.

The C. Day Rudy Company, of this city, has been given the contract for art glass windows, which will be one of the beautiful ornamentation features of the new building. The Soldiers' Orphans' Sixteeners of Pennsylvania are placing a memorial mural 9 by 12 feet on the wall of the church.

The ushers' association of the church has been organized with the following officers: President, David Friesel; secretary, Paul Ebersole; treasurer, Paul Holtzman; head usher, Fulmer Reif; assistant usher, Clyde Keel.

The Rev. Mr. Williams is making a special effort to interest the young people of the community in church affairs and there are seven societies especially for young folk in the church organization scheme. Just now the pastor is preaching a series of sermons for young people on the Ten Commandments. Next Sunday evening he will preach on "Honor Your Father and Mother."

Summer Military Camp For Boys at Fort Terry

Age cuts no figure in the military training camps which the War Department is planning nowadays. Upon the heels of the publicity which has been given the senior and junior divisions of the Plattsburg, Fort Oglethorpe and Monterey camps for this summer comes the further announcement that a training camp will be held July 6 to August 10, inclusive, at Fort Terry, Plum Island, N. Y., for all boys over 15 years of age who are not eligible for either of the other divisions.

The only recommendation needed for enrollment in the camp is that the applicant must have passed his fifteenth birthday, must be of sound physical condition, capable of hard drill and maneuver marching, and must have eyesight normal or corrected by glasses to admit of target practice. In addition all applicants must have had a grammar school training or its equivalent. The appli-

"Germany," said Mrs. Patrick Campbell at a luncheon in Boston, "thought she had next to nothing to do with the world's respect; but after this war will find herself in the position of Mr. Brown."

"Mr. Brown's little boy had a dog named Paddy. Paddy was run over and killed by a truck on the way to school. Brown had to tell her little boy, but she had to do it, and so at noon she said, 'Paddy was run over and killed this morning, dear.'"

She thought he would go on dreadfully, but he took the tragic news in a calm, grave silence. That night at bedtime, though, he suddenly shook the house with his roarings of grief and desolation.

"But, dear," said his mother, "I told you all about it, and you didn't seem to mind so very much."

"I thought," sobbed the lad—"I thought you said Paddy."

Ford Sterling, at the Keystone studios, and just completed turn Amusement Curio, in which there are said to be more laughs than pictures. A bear is an important member of the cast. The success of the brute as a mirth-maker impelled Mack Bennett, director-general, to buy a full grown, inherently fat mammoth frame of humanity who will be seen as the savage Caliban of "The Tempest" play.

LOCAL THEATERS

At the Orpheum to-day matinee and night the twentieth Century Amusement Company will present "The Devil's Invention," a modern American drama in three acts by Carl E. Freybe and Hiram K. Moderwell.

At the Regent to-day matinee and night the Regent Amusement Company will present "The Birth of a Nation," a modern American drama in three acts by Carl E. Freybe and Hiram K. Moderwell.

The magnitude of D. W. Griffith's feat in staging "The Birth of a Nation" is almost appalling. It is almost impossible to estimate the cost of the production. The devotees of the older theater, where now are the little groups of actors, the pinhead scenery and the petty properties of the so-called legitimate drama. By comparison with the new are, the "legitimate" is infinitesimal.

For Griffith, in staging "The Birth of a Nation" used Nature for his background, 50 years of American history as his subject, 18,000 people as his actors, and to less than 100 months of preparation and provided orchestral music worthy of Wagner. The motion picture speaks in which these marvelous things are done will be shown here for a return engagement at the Orpheum for three days beginning Monday with daily matinees.

Admirers of Mary Pickford will have another opportunity to-day of seeing the favorite in the production of "Poor Little Peppina," the play that has been drawing crowds to the Regent theater week. The fact that "Poor Little Peppina" is in seven reels gives wide scope to the star's acting.

To-morrow and Friday—"To Have and to Hold," from Mary Johnson's novel of the same name, featuring Wallace Reid and Miss Mae Murray, will be shown. This photoplay, which is an adaptation of one of the best known and best known novels, introduces many scenes of historical interest. This is said to be a stirring tale of love and adventure in which are scenes depicting the landing of the colonists in Jamestown.

Every act on the Majestic's bill is crammed full of laughter and not the least of these is the little skit "Majestic Team," and Williams are offering, in which a rube makes the acquaintance of a rowdy garden cabaret girl. Their conversation is lively and the rube is very funny. They wind up their act with a number of original and original work and imitations that get them much applause. Pappafax and Panlo offer a good time in their act. The comedian, who makes his appearance in clown makeup, is funny and his antics cause much hilarity. "The Secret of the Pyramids," the musical comedy "girl-act is well staged, and the girls look nice as they make their appearance in different costumes. Almie and Dody, in a singing and talking act labeled "Re-incarnation," and William Brown, in a comedy sketch entitled "The Politician," round out the vaudeville list.

To-day will surely be a great day for lovers of the silent drama who will witness the initial presentation of a great serial story, "The Mysteries of Myra" will be on the program.

because it is based upon one of the most absorbing topics of the day, and is according to W. D. Gurning, motion picture critic an absolutely "big story." The central thought of "The Mysteries of Myra" is the question of mental telepathy and psychic powers and is all the more interesting because it deals with the almost every person can think of some one or two cases which lead them to believe in the workings of spiritualism.

In the first episode you will see the Devil Worshipers working evil through psychic powers, endeavoring to secure the death of the last daughter of a former member by suggestive suicide, in order that they may secure the fortune of her late father.

Don't fail to see the concluding episode of "The Strange Case of Mary Page," here to-day also.

This play, appearing at the Colonial to-day and Thursday, was adapted to the screen from Sarah Bernhardt's emotional play, "The Witch," a William Fox Drama.
